COBURN, HARVARD'S BIG TWIRLER.

This photograph of Coburn shows him ready to send one of his speedy ones at a batter. It was taken during a practice game at Soldiers Field.

HARVARD BATTLES WITH THE PRINCETON TIGER TEAM

Coburn in the Box for the Crimson Nine and Though the Tigers Have a Great Line-Up, Harvard Boys Are Confident of Winning—Vast Enthusiasm as Teams Appear for the Game.

Special to the Boston American.

SOLDIERS FIELD, Cambridge, May 20.—Amid the roaring cheers of hundreds of students, Harvard and Princeton lined up this afternoon in their annual baseball struggle. From home plate to centre field, from the first base bleachers to the third base stands, the crowd swarmed, and when time was called it was estimated that nearly 15,000 spectators were on hand.

The team had drawn a pretty cold day for the game. Early this morning warm weather was apparently coming, but with the shift of wind there came a chill, and those who got out to the grounds this afternoon did not find a July sunshine waiting for them.

Gay Scenes in Stands.

tI was a pretty sight—one seldom seen—to look upon the masses in the stand, the women decorated out in bright and saucy colors, the men with flags, some bearing the black and orange of the Tigers and the majority supporting the crimson flag of Old John Harvard.

As cold as it was, the game promised to be worth going miles to see, as in no other game before meeting Yale a month hence will Harvard be up against such a crowd of players as came to Cambridge from Old Nassau.

Pitcher's Battle Likely.

When Umpire Robert Emslie of the National League staff called "Play" it was seen that the game was very likely to be a pitcher's battle, for the two greatest twirlers in collegedom to-day were pitted against each other. Tall lanky, loose-joint Paul Coburn was selected by Captain Walter Randall to serve up his assortment of benders and twisters for Harvard while Byram, who had once previous downed the Crimson batters, was chosen to do the slab work for the Tigers.

Both pitchers are noted for good curves, varying pace and excellent speed. Princeton's batters come here with the reputotion of stickers and have always been the fastest of college teams on the bases. On the 6ther hand, Harvard looked to be the better fielding team of the two.

Big Crowd on Hand.

It is doubtful if there was a student, professor or a single employe in the great insitution of learning when the game began. For two hours before the game started the cars from Boston were taxed to their limit, while suburban cars were also crowded with fans.

The cheering of the Harvard students was a treat to everybody. Let by Captain Dan Hurley of the football team, they sang and repeated tie and again the cheers of old Harvard:

"Har-v-a-r-d, Har-v-a-r-d, Har-v-a-r-d! Rah! Rah! Rah! Har-v-a-r-d!"

But the Princeton rooters were not to be left out in the cold, by any cans, and for their number they certainly more than upheld the honor of Old Nassau.

ARMIES MOVE FOR BIG BATTLE

Russian Papers Hear That Japs Retire Before Advance by Linevitch.

MOSCOW, May 20.—The papers here state that fighting has begun along the entire front in Manchuria, and that the Japanese are retiring before the Russian advance.

LONDON, May 20.—The Tokio correspondent of the Times says that news from Manchuria indicates that a battle is imminent.

The Russians occupy a line forty-two miles long, from Yehhohing to Hsidosin, by way of Supinchien, where they have good defensive positions and are strongly entrenched. The Japanese are advancing in three columns from Kaiyuan, Changtufu and Fakumen.

In the eastern field the Russians who retreated from Tungsun and Hsingking, rallied at Wangsnothe, forty miles north of Tungsa, but subsequently withdrew to the north, their advanced positions being now at Liuhochen, fifteen miles north of Wangkaote. Their main position is at Sallungching, where General Patorloff commands. A battle is expected soon at this place also.

LONDON HEARS THAT RUSSIAN FLEET HAS ALREADY MET TOGO

LONDON, May 20.—There are rumors in naval circles that the Russian fleet may have already fallen in with Admiral Togo.

In any case, the battle is not expected to be far off.

PARIS, May 20.—The apparently complete disappearance of the Russian far eastern fleet leads to the belief that either a battle is imminent or that Admiral Rojestvensky has succeeded in establishing a naval base.

On the other hand, it is pointed out here that the position of the fleet May 16, in latitude 13:30 and longitude 11:30, indicated that it might have been decided to follow a course north of Luzon into the Pacific instead of going through the Straits of Formosa, where Admiral Togo is believed to be awaiting Admiral Rojestvensky.

Some experts maintain that the fleet has been divided for the purpose of permitting one division to reach Vladivostok while the other occupies the attention of Admiral Togo. The results of Rojestvensky's movements are being awaited with intense interest in official quarters.

AMHERST IS CONFIDENT OF WINNING

Big Crowd Saw the Intercollegiate Games on Worcester Oval.

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER OVAL, Worcester, May 20.—Fine weather greeted the athletes who represented the New England colleges in their competition to decide the college track championship of this section of the country.

Every train arriving in the city brought large delegations of collegians, who filled the immense grand stand, arrayed in the colors emblematic of their respective college.

They were here to make all the noise possible and cheer on their representatives to win them glory for track honors.

Amherst was especially conspicuous and had every confidence that its team would again win over the field. Dartmouth was on hand to fight it out to the last ditch and give its bitter rival no peace till the last event was over.

The result of the trials showed that Williams, who has usually been a strong factor, had small chances of being very close to the top, and even M. I. T., the Hub college, pushed the Berkshire boys for the favored places.

As the program advanced the duel between Amherst and Dartmouth grew intense and the tide of battle switched from one to the other.

OLD-TIME CAPTAIN DEAD.

PORTLAND, Me., May 20.—Captain Solon Frisble of Kittery Point, one of the best-known old-time sea captains on the New England coast, is dead at the Maine General Hospital, where he underwent a surgical operation. He was sixty-six years old.

ASK ROOSEVELT TO TAKE HAND IN EQUITABLE ROW

Movement to Have Federal Inquiry Into Insurance Scandal Instituted.

NEW YORK, May 20.—President Roosevelt has been requested to take cognizance of the situation that has been brought about by the Equitable Life scandal and to institute a national investigation of the insurance business as it is now conducted.

The suggestion has been made to the President that the big insurance companies come under the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act and are properly subject to inquiry by the Bureau of Corporations. Should this course be deemed not practicable, it has been urged that Mr. Roosevelt appoint a national commission on lines of the Coal Commission.

W. F. King, former president of the Merchants' Association, has acted as spokesman this far in the movement to institute a national investigation. Commenting to-day upon the new move, he remarked:

"I am a large policyholder in more than one of the big companies, and have written to President Roosevelt, calling his attention to this national scandal.

"I reited that here was a company (the Equitable) where the earnings of the citizens in all walks of life in forty-eight States were being made a football of, two factions striving to get control at the expense of the policy holders, and endangering present policy holders by creating a scandal which has for the time being paralized the writing of new business. Dividends of policy holders are cut down by the increase of expenditures."

IN CANTABRIGIA'S NAME.

At the annual meeting of the Cantabrigia Club in Cambridge it was voted to give the $2,500 recently cleared from a bazaar to Radcliffe College, to be added to the $2,500 donated some time ago for the establishment of a scholarship to be known as the Cantabrigia Club scholarship. Moneys were voted for other charitable and philanthropic purposes.

THORP AND CHICK WIN AT THE COUNTRY CLUB

J. G. Thorp and W. C. Chick of the Oakley Club organization were the survivors this morning of the semi-final round of the golf tournament for the championship of the Brookline Country Club open meeting, consequently these two golfers met in the final match this afternoon, which started at 2:30 o'clock.

Thorp defeated W. W. Page, the young player of the Albermarle Club, whose going has surprised followers of the sport in that he had previously defeated two crack golfers. The match was one of extreme youth against an old, seasoned player who has figured more or less prominently in many national championships, and it was a supreme test of the ability of the boy.

Thorp defeated Page by the score of 3 up, 1 to play, their cards being as follows:

J. G. Thorp, Oakley—

W. W. Page, Albermarle—

The decisive defeat of Thomas G. Stevenson, one of the best of the Country Club players, by W. C. Chick, came somewhat in the nature of a surprise, the score having been 5 up 4 to play. The Oakley player assumed the lead at the very outset and though Stevenson occasionally made a stand Chick was never in danger of losing the lead. He is being picked by many to win the championship of the tournament. Their cards:

MOVE FOR PROBING ALL STATE ASYLUMS WILL BE MADE MONDAY

REP. MARK N. SKERRETT, ROUSED BY GRACE DARBY CASE, WILL INTRODUCE RESOLVE.

BANGOR ME. May 19 1905.

I heartily thank the Boston American for the manner in which it has reported the facts regarding me—

Grace E. H. Darby.

GRACE DARBY THANKS BOSTON AMERICAN.

Bangor, Me., May 19, 1905.

I heartily thank the BOSTON AMERICAN for the manner in which it has reported the facts regarding me.

GRACE E. H. DARBY.

Believing that it is entirely too easy to have committed to an insane asylum in this State a person who may be sane, Representative Mark N. Skerrett of Worcester will on Monday introduce an order in the House of Representatives asking that the Taunton Insane Asylum, as well as all other institutions of the kind in this Commonwealth, be searchingly investigated.

The proposed action of Mr. Skerrett is the result of the revelations that have been made by Grace Darby, who escaped from the Taunton Insane Asylum more than two weeks ago, and who, it is declared, was never insane, although she spent five years as the associate of inmates of that madhouse.

AN INVESTIGATION NEEDED.

Mr. Skerrett says that he knows of his own knowledge of people having been sent to insane asylums who were addicted to the use of liquor and for other failings that could not be construed as insanity. He believes that the investigations should be made with a view to improving the system that prevails of committing persons to asylums.

APPLIES TO ALL ASYLUMS.

"It was my first idea," said Mr. Skerrett to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, "to have an investigation of the Taunton asylum only. I talked the matter over with some of my friends in the Legislature and they believed that the matter was of such great importance that it should apply to all of the asylums in the State. I have not drawn the order up yet, but will have it ready to be introduced on Monday.

"I should like to have it known that I have no ill will against any member of the State Board of Insanity, and have no charges to make against any person. It is the system of commitment that I think is too lax and should be improved for the benefit of the inmates of these institutions.

"I think that many persons are sent to insane asylums who never ought to go inside the walls of a madhouse. As the law stands now any two doctors may send a person to an asylum. It gives too great an opportunity for getting out of the way people who are objectionable, whether they are insane or not. It should require more than two doctors to pass upon such a grave matter as a person's mental soundness and liberty.

INVESTIGATED SUCH CASES.

"I have been called upon myself to investigate cases of people who have been wrongfully committed to asylums. I have known of them being put in madhouses because they drank and for other reasons that could not be construed sufficient to take away their liberty and doom them to associate with lunatics.

"I want to say again that I am not aiming at any officials of the State. Particularly am I not opposed to Dr. Owen Copp of the State Board of Insanity. I think he is the best man for that place that we could possibly get. But a more rigid examination by more than two alienists should be made before a person is locked up in a place like the Taunton Insane Asylum."

The Hon. Loyed E. Chamberlain of Brockton, one of the most prominent of the board of trustees of the Taunton Institution, declares that he is in favor of an investigation of that asylum. He intimates that if there are persons in official connection with that asylum who are in-

COMPLETE STORY OF GRACE DARBY'S LIFE TOLD BY HERSELF

CHAPTER II.

THE PRELUDE TO FIVE YEARS OF TORTURE.

By Grace Evelyn Hathorne Darby

COPYRIGHT, 1905, BY AMERICAN-JOURNAL-EXAMINER.

THE State Industrial School at Lancaster seemed like a terrible place when I first went to it. In view of what I have passed through during the past seven years it was not so very bad, comparatively. But it was a prison, in a way, and I had been free before, even if I had had masters and mistresses with power to make me do as they wished.

It seems to have been my fate that almost every place I have been sent to has been much worse than the one before it. As the Perleys farm at Ipswich was worse than the previous homes I had been in, so the Lancaster school was worse than the Perley farm, Tewksbury was worse than Lancaster; last and worst of all was Taunton.

First Experience with Discipline.

Lancaster was my first experience with strict discipline. And that is what it is there. There were many rules, and to break any one of them meant punishment. They were hard rules, hard to keep and easy to break.

For instance, there could be no whispering or talking except during the recreation "hours"—which were less than one hour all day—twenty minutes in the afternoon and twenty-five minutes at night. And it was against the rules to speak of any affairs outside the institution, even during those recreation periods.

It has always seemed to me from that day that there never was a word so abused as "recreation." For the forty-five minutes a day we girls were allowed to talk to one another, with the proviso that we mustn't talk about anything we were really interested in, and plenty of attentive ears and eyes to catch us if we disobeyed.

Learned Sewing and Kitchen Work.

For disobedience we were punished by having our recreation period shortened or taken away, and by having marks placed against our names which would extend the length of time we would have to stay in the school.

It is generally understood there that when an inmate becomes eighteen or twenty-one years old she is set free as being no longer a pauper, but able to earn her living. For nine months I was there, learning sewing and kitchen work. I certainly learned some things, although I was never in the least contented.

Then I was sent to the State almshouse at Tewksbury.

Terrible Life at Tewksbury.

The less I remember about Tewksbury the better for my comfort. It is a terrible place. There are paupers and foolish people and insane people there. I was there only three months, but it seemed like years. Then I was sent to Waverley, to the home for feeble-minded.

I suppose my being sent there was the worst shock my pride ever got. I was to learn later what it meant to be regarded as insane. It had never occurred to me to question the fact that my own brain was as good as anybody else's, and when they took me to Waverley and I found out what the place was I cannot describe my feelings.

Shame at Being Thought Insane.

It wasn't being enraged. That doesn't describe it. It was more being mortified and ashamed to think that I was classed with the poor idiots and foolish inmates of the place.

In some respects Waverley was a pleasant place. They didn't abuse the prisoners there, mostly, I think, because the inmates are not bright and don't understand much of what is said to them anyway.

The attendants were not brutal, and the doctors seemed to be not especially harsh. At least it seems to me now that Waverley was quite a place. Of course I can't help comparing it with Taunton, and it is heaven by comparison. The only great fault I can find with Waverley now, as I look back across the five years at Taunton, is that we had to work too hard.

Had to Work Twelve Hours a Day.

I read somewhere the other day something someone said about the "gospel of work." I guess that is the gospel they believe in at Waverley. I worked in the laundry and the sewing room. I worked from six o'clock in the morning until six o'clock at night, with a short time out at noon to go back to the house to dinner.

I seem to have got my share of work wherever I have been. Well, I am willing to work, if they don't tire me to death. I have never objected except once at Taunton, when I was crowded too hard. When you are working hard you aren't so likely to think.

Broke Her Ankle Trying to Escape.

The thoughts that come to your mind will keep getting back to open doors and freedom when you are a prisoner. I suppose life is the greatest thing to all of us. Next to that is being free. You long for it and almost cry for it, and there is nothing you can do.

That is the worst part of it; the feeling that you can do nothing, that nobody will believe what you tell them, and that you must just live on as you are, with no hope.

There came a time when I couldn't stand it any longer after I had been at Waverley nearly two years, and I tried to escape. I broke my ankle doing it and had to go back.

Beginning Five Years of Torture.

That experience of mine in trying to run away from Waverley helped me a lot when it came to escaping from Taunton, for it taught me some of the things not to do. It might be interesting enough for a chapter all by itself.

The most important thing about the Waverley attempt to escape was that it caused me to be transferred to Taunton. They took me there just as soon as I could walk. That was the beginning of five years of torture. Nobody can believe the horrors of an asylum like that unless he or she has been there. I will tell you about them to-morrow.

To Be Continued To-Morrow in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

DR. COPP'S CIRCULAR ON MISS GRACE DARBY

The State Board of Insanity has at last taken official cognizance of the escape of Grace Darby, the beautiful girl patient, from the Taunton Insane Asylum, and a circular, issued by Secretary Owen Copp, states the position of the board in the matter. Dr. Copp admits that Miss Darby is safe as long as she remains outside the State of Massachusetts, and unless she commits some crime she cannot be extradited. The statement of the board is as follows:

"In view of the many exaggerated and misleading statements circulated in newspapers concerning the case of Miss Grace Darby, an escaped patient from the Taunton Insane Hospital, the State Board of Insanity deems it proper to give the following outline of her history and care:

Certified as Insane.

"In 1896 at the age of fifteen she was committed to the State Industrial School. She was placed, after a time, by the trustees in the care of various families, whence her moral delinquencies compelled her removal, and finally her commitment to the State Almshouse. Thence, in 1898, she was placed in the School for the Feeble-Minded, where she remained until July, 1900, when it became impossible through the mild discipline of the school to longer control her perverse and immoral propensities. She was examined by Drs. George F. Jelly and Arthur C. Jelly, certified as insane, and duly committed by the Probate Court of Suffolk County to Taunton Insane Hospital.

"This board has been conversant with her care at this hospital. It has repeatedly investigated her mental condition and the propriety of keeping her under confinement at the request of the Governor and various other persons who became interested in her. Several attorneys-at-law have inquired into her case, and some have been advised by the board to bring her before the court on a writ of habeas corpus for a judicial decision as to the propriety of detaining her as an insane person.

Not a Violent Patient.

"The board has had no doubt of her mental deficiency and moral irresponsibility, and has deemed it proper not to release her from the hospital, first, because her mental and moral weakness would make her the victim of any unprincipled male person, from whom it would seem to be kind to protect her, and second, because the public should be safeguarded against the reproduction of imbeciles and degenerates.

"At the hospital she was not a violent patient, so that it seemed to the superintendent unkind to compel her to live in association with such in order to prevent the possibility of her escape. Therefore she was placed in the pleasantest ward, where there is least watchfulness and the greatest opportunity to escape. Aside from the attentive care of nurses, escape would be easy under these circumstances in this hospital, as in any other. The unfortunate girl's happiness justified such risk. The welfare of many other patients required that the hospital spirit should prevail in such a ward instead of the rigor of prison discipline.

Cannot Be Extradited.

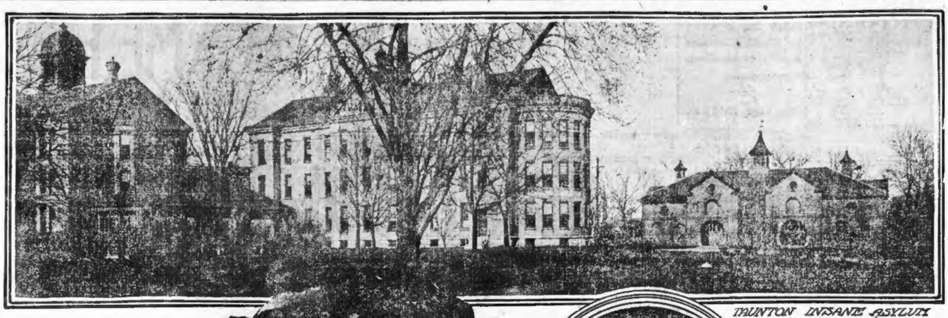

"If Miss Darby should be found in Massachusetts, it would be the plain duty of the trustees of the hospital to return her to its care. If, however, she has gone beyond the limits of Massachusetts, they have no authority over her.

"She cannot be extradited, and so long as she does not violate any of the laws of the community in which she may be living, nor become a public dependent, this board knows of no way in which she could be taken into custody, unless by instituting proceedings for her commitment to an insane hospital. If the officials of such hospital should bring her to the border of Massachusetts, the trustees of the Taunton hospital should receive her back into their care. Inasmuch as she is not a violent person, and so long as her conduct does not demonstrate to her friends and the public the necessity of again restraining her, it is doubtful whether such proceedings would be advisable. It would be the duty of the trustees and of this board to co-operate in any proper effort to return her to this State, but the initiative may be safely left to the public officials in the community where she may be found.

"The trustees and officials of the Taunton Insane Hospital have the confidence of this board, and deserve that of the public.

"OWEN COPP, M. D.,

capable of holding their positions that they will be removed.

Wants Investigation.

To a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN Mr. Chamberlain said: "I want the facts, and if an investigation will produce them it is what we want. It is asserted that things are wrong at the hospital. We on the trustee board do not know it. It is our business to look out for the business affairs of the institution. If there are persons connected with the hospital who are not what they should be, in any sense, we must know it."

Miss Darby's exclusive story of her life, now being told in the AMERICAN, will furnish many facts which will be of value in the investigation proposed by Mr. Skerrett. To-morrow her life story takes up her five years' experience as a sane girl in the Taunton madhouse, and will be a unique contribution to the literature on this subject.

That there is urgent need for such an investigation is the firm belief of many members of the Legislature. The statement by Taunton people and by employes of the asylum to BOSTON AMERICAN reporters relating to the escape of Miss Darby have concentrated the public gaze upon that point.

Veiled charges have already been made to the effect that the management of the Taunton institution is not all that it should be, and it is suspected that similar conditions may be found at other public hospitals. Mr. Skerrett has already done good work for the State in bringing about through the Legislature needed reforms at the State Hospital for Dipsomaniacs at Foxboro, and now he desires to ascertain by the same means the condition of affairs at other institutions.

TO EXAMINE TAUNTON EARLY.

It is believed that the asylum at Taunton will be one of the first to be investigated. The escape of Miss Darby will thus be looked into officially, in case Mr. Skerrett's order is adopted, and that before very long. The State officials will endeavor to learn more of the facts regarding the method of her escape and the conditions that made it possible for her to walk out of the place, traverse a distance of a mile inside the grounds without being seen, and then remain for two days in the city without being apprehended. But more especially will they try to learn about the facts of inmates held as insane who, like Miss Darby, are believed by attendants and nurses to be entirely sane.

It has also been asserted that Dr. John P. Brown, superintendent of the institution, has been retained in office for the past six years, although unable, because of his advanced age and attendant illness to perform his duties. The investigation will learn the facts in this case also.

Another feature that will be included in the investigation will be the financial situation of the institutions. The State has appropriated $1,761,204.10 this year for the care of the insane in the State, and Mr. Skerrett feels that this fact is ample ground for the investigation on a financial basis. The appropriation this year for the Taunton Asylum alone was $161,858.

COMMISSION OF FIVE.

Mr. Skerrett's definite proposal is for the adoption of an order which will provide that the Governor shall appoint a commission of five men competent to weigh conditions, who shall conduct the investigation. They are to include in their examination expenditures, the care and treatment of the inmates and the personnel of the employes.

Mr. Skerrett has for two years been a member of the ways and means committee of the Legislature, and in this position he has had the following of the appropriations for the care of the insane. He is convinced that considering the amount of money which the State is spending this is a good time to make certain that it is all going in the right direction and that the State is getting the best out of it.

J. H. CUNNINGHAM DIES AT HOSPITAL

James H. Cunningham, chief clerk in the soldiers' relief department of the city, died at the Massachusetts General Hospital early to-day of a complication of diseases, after an illness of ten days. Mr. Cunningham had been connected with this department for years. He resided at No. 82 Keyes street, Jamaica Plain, and was unmarried.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PARK, Boston, May 20.—To-day's game between the Hubites and Mound City boys meant much to both, as the loser was forced down into the tailend position. For this reason both managers, Tenney and Burke, decided to put in their strongest batteries.

Young was selected to serve up his assortment for the home team, while Win Kellum, the old southpaw, who is a Boston American discard, was thought the proper man to do the slab work for the visitors by Manager Burke.

The usual Saturday crowd was in attendance. Long before the call of the game the most ardent fans began to put in appearance, for to them the preliminary practice is just as much sport to witness as the game itself.

With Jim Delehanty back on the team and bracing up the batting side, some improvement may be expected all along the line, and to salt away the next brace of games with the Cardinals should be readily accomplished.

A little better support behind the pitcher will bring the results and cut out the breaks that have been so disastrous.

LAWYER DIXON IS SUSPENDED FOR 2 YEARS

Judge Sheldon Sustains Bar Association's Charges of Abuse of Legal Process.

On charges of malpractice and misconduct preferred by the Boston Bar Association, Lawyer Jonathan B. Dixon of Reading has been suspended from practicing in the courts for two years by order of Judge Sheldon in the Superior Equity Court. The complaint of the Bar Association against Mr. Dixon alleged abuse of legal process by excessive attachments, and acting in bad faith.

John F. Cronan of No. 30 Court street, who was appointed administrator of the estate of Julius Adams, made the complaint to the Bar Association. Adams was a lawyer of South Boston, and when he died he left an estate valued at $500,000. Under provision of the will of Adams, Reginald Adams was allowed $12,500. Julius Adams died December 18, 1899.

After the allowance of the will in 1902, Reginald Adams made an assignment to F. A. Harmon, who in turn made an assignment to Johnathan B. Dixon, the defendant, who tried to get the balance of the funds belonging to Reginald Adams in the hands of Administrator Cronan. Cronan refused to deliver the money, as there were a number of attachments pending against Adams, and because Dixon refused to state the amount due him. Reginald Adams was petitioned inti bankruptcy soon afterward. Dixon sued Cronan for 125,000 on his assignment and the case was compromised by the payment of $1,000 to Dixon after a bill of interpleader had been filed by Cronan.

Upon Cronan complaining to the Bar Association, Dixon brought suit against Cronan for $50,000 for libel and slander.

CHARGE THEFT OF $1,350 GEMS

James Cassidy, thirty-two years old, of No. 307 Crescent avenue, Chelsea, was arrested in that city to-day by Inspectors Burr and Patterson, of Boston, charged with breaking and entering and the larceny of $1,350 worth of watches and jewelry from the pawnshop at No. 228 Main street, Charlestown, owned by Max Silberman. The robbery took place last July. The police say Cassidy admits that he is responsible for the robbery.

FIRST ARREST FOR OUTBREAK BY "MED FACS"

Benjamin Joy, a Senior, Caught After Scene at the Phillips Brooks House.

SKELETON HUNG IN STREET

Harvard "Med Facs" engaged in their annual outbreak last night. Among other things they took a skeleton from the Lawrence Scientific School and hung it on a rope, stretched ninety feet above Massachusetts avenue, in Cambridge, purloined a bronze statue from the Phillips Brooks House, wrapped it in an overcoat and left it for some one else to find, and smashed windows and doors right and left.

Benjamin Joy, a senior, was arrested as he left the Phillips Brooks house and was to-day arraigned before Judge Almy and held in $1,500 for the Grand Jury. The bail was furnished by Professor Charles H. Beal and John C. Gray, of the Harvard Law School, who also appeared as attorneys for the young man. The matter was not gone into to-day, Joy waiving the reading of the complaint.

President Eliot and Dean Hurlburt declare to-day that they will press the matter to the fullest extent of the law. Past pranks of this secret order have gone unpunished. To-day's arrest is the first ever made following a "Med Fac" outbreak. Joy has nothing to say to-day. The police meanwhile are searching for persons whose names they have, one of them a noted Harvard athlete.

First there was a banquet in Boston. Then, just before midnight, the "Med Facs" returned to Cambridge. They began work at the Lawrence Scientific School. There they took the skeleton, and, proceeding to the Holyoke House, opposite Gray Hall, they strung it up, ninety feet above the ground. A big crowd of students, who had heard of the affair, gathered and shouted about the dangling skeleton until there was pandemonium in the street.

Expect Another Arrest.

Then the "Med Facs" proceeded to the Phillips Brooks house. There they smashed doors and windows, going inside and taking out the bronze statue. This was wrapped in an overcoat and removed to Fogg avenue, near the museum.

Meanwhile freshmen had been attracted to the Phillips Brooks house, and, thinking the "Med Facs" were burglars, they called the police. Just as the police arrived the "Med Facs" made a dash out. The arrest was made at this time. A noted athlete, said to be in New Haven to-day, is alleged to be another of the men seen there, and he may be arrsted on his return to Cambridge.

EXPECT RATE WAR ON BOATS TO HALIFAX

New Steamship Line Is to Compete with the Plant Company.

A rate war between the Plant Steamship Line and the Boston & Nova Scotia Steamship Company is expected to begin on July 1, when the latter line will commence to operate between this port and Halifax.

A reduction in the present return trip rate of $14 is promised by the management of the new company which will make application next week at the State House for a Massachusetts charter. The contest for control of the traffic between Boston, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, so long held by the Plant Line, promises to be as interesting and as beneficial to the travelling public as the rate war a year ago between the trans-atlantic steamship companies.

Capital of $100,000.

The new company will have a apital of $100,000, divided into 1,000 shares, all of which, it is said, has been disposed of. In the meantime proceedings have been instituted in Halifax by which it is sought to have a receiver appointed for the Plant Steamship Company. Behind these proceedings are Alfred S. Hayes and George E. Gale, the organizers of the new company. Both at attorneys in this city and, with F. J. Daggett and Charles E. Pye, own one-fourth of the stock of the Plant Line.

Mr. Gale stated to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day that application will also be made in this State next week for the appointment of a receiver to supplement the Halifax action.

The new steamship company is the outgrowth of the differences between Messrs. Gale and Hayes on the one side and Manager A. W. Perry of the Plant Line on the other.

The former lost their positions on the board of directors through litigation, and have dropped an appeal to a higher court which was pending, to form this new steamship company with a capital of $100,000, which is claimed to be all paid in.

Men in New Company.

Behind the new company also are James A. Flanders, a former manager of the Plant Line and brother of the general passenger agent of the Boston & Maine, who will be president; John A. Gale of Brookline, president of the Beacon Trust Company; William S. Bangs of Newton, William E. Biddle, president of the Amesbury National ank; Alexander S. Paton, formerly a Leominster manufacturer, and Washington Hoitt, a well-known Boston capitalist.

"You can tell the public that they will get to Halifax cheap enough this Summer," said Mr. George E. Gale. "We will reduce the present rate to Halifax, and there may be other reductions. The new line will go into operation on July 1. For the present we contemplate making two trips weekly between Halifax and Boston, and later a boat will be run to Newfoundland, connecting with the Boston boat. We have options on steamers and dock facilities, but for obvious reasons do not care to make public the details at this time."

COURT TAKES ROWENA JONES FROM GUARDIAN SHE SAID WAS CRUEL

REID PHOTO.

ROWENA JONES

LITTLE GIRL WHO NEED NOT RETURN TO HER GUARDIAN.

Probate Judge Decides She May Stay With Foster Parents Who Have Been Kind to Her.

Sadie Rowena Jones rejoices in a happy home and loving foster parents. In the Probate Court yesterday Judge McKim decided that Constable Gusteen I. Kenerson, of Dorchester, and his wife, Mary Jane, were proper people to have the care of this bright-faced little girl, whose tender years have known many changes and not a few sorrows.

The decision filled Sadie Rowena's heart with joy.

Since October 1903 she has been a member of the Kenerson homestead and has been happy in that knowledge, though her contentment has ever been marred by the fear that at any moment she might be taken away from the kindest people she had ever known and sent back to her legal guardian, Peter A. Fay, of Lowell, where she declares she was not only miserable, but ill-treated.

The case of Sadie Rowena Jones is one which repetition never makes less sad. Left an orphan by the death of her parents, Prescott Lawson Jones and Mary Emma Jones, she found herself homeless and friendless.

The law appointed Peter Fay of Lowell her guardian, and from her home in Dracut she went to his home to live. She and her former guardian differ in their opinion of themselves and of each other. Sadie says she was as good as she knew how to be, and that Mr. Fay ill-treated her. Mr. Fay is alleged to have said she was a stubborn child and needed a firm hand. Through the aid of a married man, forty-five years of age, living apart from his wife, Sadie was taken from Mr. Fay's house to the home of the Kenersons, for whom this man formerly worked.

Mrs. Kenerson liked the girl from the start. "She was truthful, obedient, honest and helpful," she declares. "I'd die for her as soon as for one of my own children." Sadie Jones's attitude in court showed plainly which home she wanted, and the Court took her desire as a text for its conduct.

Hereafter Sadie Jones rests secure as a member of the Kenerson household, in Dorchester, and for the first time in her life need have no fear of being subjected to the guardianship of unwelcome people.

For the present it would seem that her troubles are at an end.

PRIEST AND BURGLAR IN MIDNIGHT GRAPPLE

REV. J. A. PROVOST OF FALL RIVER HAS EXCITING TUSSLE WITH INTRUDER.

Special to the Boston American.

FALL RIVER, May 20.—Surprising a burglar who had entered his room in the darkness, soon after midnight, Rev. J. A. Prevost, pastor of the Notre Dame de Lourdes Church, grappled with the intruder. While struggling, the nocturnal visitor hissed in the pastor's ear: "Don't you make an outcry or I'll kill you."

The pastor couldn't see whether he had a weapon or not, and therefore took no chances. Locked in each others' embrace, the priest and the burglar swung around the room until the priest, working for this opportunity, struck the switch, turning on the electric lights. But this effort cost him a chance to hold the burglar, who threw the pastor heavily on the bed and ran into the yard.

The several other priests in the house were quickly aroused, and, dressing hurriedly, ran out and searched the neighborhood, but got no trace of the intruder. A subsequent investigation to-day shows that the burglar first robbed the poor boxes of the church after the evening service, and got into the rectory by prying up a window in the sexton's office.

There he broke into a desk and got $15 in cash before going to the pastor's room. Nothing is missed by the pastor. Detectives are looking for a young man from twenty-two to twenty-five years of age, height about five feet eight inches, stout of build, dark complexion, smooth face and attired in dark clothes.

ESCAPED FROM CONCORD.

Boston police have been asked to search for John Colded, a convicted prisoner sentenced to Concord Reformatory, who escaped from a constable while alighting from a train at Concord on May 11. He is described as being five feet tall, weighing about 112 pounds, with black hair, dark complexion, prominent nose, with scar on end, and wearing dark clothes. He is about eighteen years old.

OLD LAWYER DEAD.

Davies Wilson, a retired lawyer, is dead at his home, the Dunvegan, No. 1654 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge. He was seventy-four years of age and was a native of Cincinnati.

GREAT STRIKE IN CHICAGO IS NOW SETTLED

Agreement Reached Between Employers and Teamsters, Who Will Return to Work.

CONTEST COST $10,835,000

Chicago's Loss in Teamsters' Strike

Extra policemen	$50,000
Deputies	35,000
Loss in wages	500,000
Union assessments	250,000
Business shrinkage	10,000,000
Total	$10,835,000

CHICAGO, May 20.—"As the result of a compromise the strikers have agreed to return to work," announced Levy Mayer, attorney and spokesman for the employers, to-day immediately after a conference with labor leaders. This is the employers' official anouncement.

It was predicted yesterday the strike would be ended before night.

Union leaders declare a settlement is practically agreed upon, but that the acceptance by a committee of the employes does not mean that this action cannot be repudiated by a referendum vote by the unions. The Teamsters' Joint Council must pass upon the acceptance and the unions may then resort to a vote.

Strike Began April 6.

The strike began April 6. On that date seventy-one teamsters employed by Montgomery Ward & Co. were called out to support a strike of seventeen garment workers, who had been out since November 19, 1904. As employers thereafter discharged teamsters because of refusals to deliver goods to strike-bound houses the strike spread, until 3,772 teamsters were on strike against a score of department stores.

Teamsters have lost in wages $500,000. The unions have been assessed $250,000.

Employers estimate the shrinkage in business and railroad earnings and other losses at nearly $10,000,000.

Excited by the daily demonstrations of disquiet among their elders, school children and messenger boys struck. Policemen were necessary to subdue obstreperous leaders of the school children.

Business in large districts of the city has been paralyized.

2,000 Strike-Breakers.

Two thousand negro strike-breakers were shipped into Chicago from the South. A majority of them are the vicious and dangerous roustabouts and desperadoes of the river levees. They were given pistols and other weapons and told to "defend" themselves. Gratified at being supported in a hostile attitude toward the whites, the negroes shot and beat many inoffensive citizens. One victim was Enoch Carlson, aged nine, who innocently stood by as a spectator, while two drunken negroes passed. The child died in agony. His relatives and their neighbors sought the negro to lynch him, but he escaped.

Riots and assaults resulted in the death of eight persons and the serious injuring of 157 others. Twenty-three hundred policemen and 500 deputy sheriffs were detailed by city and county for duty. Since the inception of the strike every wagon driven by a non-union man was guarded by officers wherever it went. The city spent $50,000 for extra policemen, while $35,000 was expended by the county for deputies.

REPORT MRS. LIVERMORE COMFORTABLE

Famous Woman Leader Fights Bravely for Life Against Serious Illness.

"There is no improvement in Mrs. Livermore's condition. She still rests comfortably. There is no immediate danger, so far as the relatives of the family can see."

The above statement was given to the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day regarding the condition of Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, who is seriously ill at her home in Melrose, by her oldest grand-daughter, Mrs. M. D. Barrows.

Mrs. Livermore passed a very comfortable night, and slept considerably. Mrs. Barrows was in constant attendance at the bedside. Dr. Godfrey Ryder of Malden paid two visits. A trained nurse was with Mrs. Livermore all night, and also Mrs. C. W. Boynton, who has been Mrs. Livermore's private secretary for many years.

Mary Ashton Rice Livermore was born in Boston, December 19, 1820. Her father was of Welsh descent and served in the United States Navy during the War of 1812. She was brought up to respect religion. Every child in her family from the age of seven was expected to read the Bible through at least once a year. She has often said that she observed that custom until she was twenty-three years old, "so that the book was ingrained in my memory a part of very self."

Early in life she went South and became a teacher in a Virginian family and soon after her return North she married Rev. Daniel Parker Livermore. She made an ideal minister's wife and later when her husband engaged in editorial work was a valuable assistant.

But it was as a lecturer that Mrs. Livermore gained fame from one end of the continent to the other, and as a fearless champion of women's rights and temperance. She has also been a prolific writer on a variety of subjects. She was a reporter for newspapers when female reporters were not common, one of her biggest assignments being to report the proceedings of the National Convention which nominated Lincoln.

LIEUT. SMITH FALLS AND BREAKS LEG

Lieutenant Frederick J. Smith of the Court Square Station is on an enforced absence from duty, because of a painful injury which he met with in his home, No. 175 Union street, Brighton. While going down stairs he tripped and fell, breaking both of the small bones of the left leg and spraining his left ankle.

GIVING OF DISCOUNTS IS LEGAL, SAYS COURT

FULL BENCH RULES THAT IT DOES NOT VIOLATE ANTI-MONOPOLY STATUTE.

The full bench of the Supreme Court of this State to-day handed down a decision holding that the granting of discounts by manufacturers to secure an exclusive market for their products does not constitute a violation of Chapter 56 of the Revised Laws, designed to prevent monopolies. The decision is written by Chief Justice Knowlton, who says in conclusion:

"There is a considerable difference between saying 'You cannot buy my goods except upon condition you will not sell goods from others, and 'If you sell goods manufactured by others you cannot have any of mine,' or 'I am ready to sell you my goods freely and you may sell goods of others as much as you choose, but I will make you a reasonable offer and induce ment to increase the sale of my goods by giving discounts, if you sell my goods exclusively.'"

Exceptions Sustained.

The decision sustained the bill of exceptions filed by Abe Strauss of Cambridge, a travelling salesman for the Continental Tobacco Company of New York, against the decision of the Superior Court of Plymouth County, holding him guilty of a violation of the anti-monopoly statute, which reads as follows:

"A person, firm, corporation or association of persons doing business in this Commonwealth shall not make it a condition of the sale of goods, wares or merchandise that the purchaser shall not sell or deal in the goods, wares or merchandise of any other person, firm, corporation or association of persons, but the provisions of this section shall not prohibit the appointment of agents or special agents for the sale of or the making of contracts for the exclusive sale of goods, wares or merchandise.

"Whoever, as principal or agent, violates the provisions of this section shall be punished after the first offence by a fine of not less than $50 or more than $100, and for each succeeding offence by a fine of not less than $100 or more than $500 or by imprisonment for not more than a year, or by both fine and imprisonment."

Counts in Indictment.

The indictment against Straus represented that he had violated this statute by agreeing to give to Frank J. Dutra of Brockton, Richard J. Casey of Bridgewater, E. C. Hall of Brockton and W. Scott Edson of Brockton, dealers in tobacco, a discount of "2 per cent. and 2 per cent." upon their promise not to sell or deal in the plug tobacco of any other company. Strauss further agreed, it was alleged, upon these conditions to give the dealers an additional discount of 6 per cent. at the end of the year.

When the case came before Judge Lawton in the Plymouth Superior Court, in charging the jury, he said:

"Upon all the evidence, if you are satisfied that the defendant, acting for the Continental Tobacco Company, offered for sale to the persons mentioned in the indictment, more favorable terms if such persons should not sell or deal in the plug tobacco of any other firm or corporation, it is your duty to find the defendant guilty."

Strauss was found guilty and appealed.

ENDYMION FAR IN LEAD IN YACHT CONTEST

Little Fleur de Lys Second When Boats Passed Nantucket in Ocean Race.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Wireless reports state that the schooner yacht Endymion is leading in the 3,000-mile cross-ocean race for the Kaiser's cup, being far in the lead when she passed the Nantucket lightship, northeast. Nearest to her, it is also said, were the Fleur de Lys, Captain Tom Bohlin and a Gloucester crew, the Thistle and the Utawana.

The Endymion, the Fleur de Lys, the Utawana and the Thistle took the northern course in preference to the southern, and this at this time partly accounts for their leading the fleet. They run a chance, however, of meeting ice, a chance which is not likely with the other vessels. Still, Captain Bohlin and the other three captains were willing to take the chance.

At the time the Endymion, owned by George Lauder, Jr., and the other three vessels passed Nantucket lightship, they must have been many miles to windward of the Hamburg, Atlantic and Hildegarde, which held on to the port tack on which they crossed the line, heading to the southeast by south. The wind at the start was from the east, and when the yachts were lost in the fog the Atlantic was leading, with the Ailsa slightly to windward and the Hamburg near by. The Hildegarde was the fourth boat.

Captain Loesch on the Endymion, as soon as the fog screened his movements from the leader, tacked his yacht and stood about northeast toward the eastern end of Long Island. He was followed after by the Fleur de Lys, Thistle and Utowana.

The Endymion was the fastest under the conditions that prevailed, and she was the first to get the shifts in the wind that enabled her to start sheets, and the judgment shown by Captain Loesch has without doubt put the Endymion far to windward of the Hamburg and Atlantic and given him a good lead in the race.

The American yacht Apache, one of the contestants in the transatlantic race for the Emperor William cup, was sighted by the steamer Prinzess Alice yesterday, about sixty-five miles east of Nantucket lightship. At that time the Apache was running due east, with every stitch of canvas set. None of the other racers was sighted by the Prinzess Alice.

ARGUE FOR NEW TRIAL IN CASE OF MRS. ROGERS

Attorney General Opposes Motion Before Supreme Court of Vermont.

DECISION FIRST OF WEEK

MONTPELIER, Vt., May 20.—On Monday or, at the very latest, Tuesday next, Mary Rogers will know whether she will be retried by the State of Vermont for the murder of her husband, or will have to depend upon Governor Bell to grant her another reprieve until time for the next Legislature to act, in order to escape the gallows.

The arguments for and against a new trial have been heard by the Supreme Court and that body now has the matter under consideration. Attorneys Thomas W. Moloney of Rutland and John H. Senter of this city appeared in behalf of the condemned woman, and Attorney-General Clark C. Fitts appeared for the State.

Asks for New Trial.

Mr. Moloney, in addressing the court, contended that there was doubt as to the real cause of Marcus Rogers's death, inasmuch as it had been discovered after the autopsy that the skull was fractured. This would indicate, he maintained, that Rogers might have met his death in another way than by suffocation, which was the contention of the State at Mrs. Rogers's trial.

He called attention to the fact that insanity could be traced for some generations in Mrs. Rogers's family and to her physical condition at the time of the tragedy. He also cited the affidavit of the physician who examined her two days before the death of her husband and declared that she was then suffering from a form of insanity.

And finally he produced the confession of Leon Perham, who was found guilty of complicity in the murder of Rogers and is now serving a term of life imprisonment in the State Prison at Windsor.

Perham confesses that he killed Rogers and that he perjured himself on the witness stand to save his own neck.

"Travesty on Justice."

Attorney-General Fitts, opposing the motion for a new trial, declared that the fracture discovered in Rogers's skull had been caused by the physicians when they performed the autopsy; that Perham's confession was unreliable because of the state of the young man's mind; that the evidence did not prove that Mrs. Rogers was insane; that the physician who said he had examined Mrs. Rogers two days prior to the murder was wrong, inasmuch as Mrs. Rogers was in Bennington at the time he declared he examined her in Hoosick Falls; and that it would be a travesty of justice to send the case back to Bennington for another trial.

Mr. Senter said that taking the new evidence as a whole there was sufficient grounds to believe that the mass of testimony would have the effect of producing a change in the minds of the jurymen and that the new trial ought therefore to be ordered.

GIRLS SCORE IN MINSTREL SHOW

Women Act as End Men at Entertainment of R. H. White Co. Employes.

Shouts of merriment filled Potter Hall at the minstrel show and dance by the members of the R. H. White Company Mutual Benefit Association, where several hundred employes of the big firm and their friends had gathered to laugh at the jokes sprung by their workmates.

A military scene opened the evening's entertainment. Several musical numbers were given, and then an old-time minstrel show caused roars of laughter. W. F. Ayres was interlocutor, and the end men were William Hamblett, Salome Hermann, Edgar M. Bradley, M. Leona Hartshorn, C. W. Brownell, Annie Kernan, Ernest F. Malone and Anna Sullivan.

Between the first and second parts of the entertainment, President Fletcher introduced Mr. Alexander MacLachlan, one of the directors of the corporation and honorary president of the association, who appeared for Mr. R. H. White, who was unable to be present. Mr. MacLachlan was greeted with uproarious applause. He said there never was a time when the necessity for politeness was more apparent than now. The firm is constantly looking for bright, smart people to occupy positions where merit and hard work would be appreciated, and who could fit themselves for higher positions.

There is always plenty of room at the top, said Mr. MacLachlan, in concluding, and in no place is ability better appreciated or more quickly taken into account than at R. H. White's.

Mr. MacLachlan read a short letter from Mr. George R. Leghorn, superintendent of the store, who was unable to be present, but who sent his best wishes to the employes.

'NAN' FLOWER NOT BECKER'S

Mr. Fred C. Becker, the well-known florist of Cambridge, declares that he knows nothing of the so-called "Nan Patterson flower" which has been sold in the market district and said to have been named for the actress.

Mr. Becker is a well-known horticulturist and says that the flower is a very old one, and that he had nothing to do with its production or offering in the market.

GAS VICTIM DIES; HUSBAND FORGIVES

Mrs. Mary Palmer, wife of John Palmer, of No. 899 Washington street, who was found suffering from gas poisoning in a West End hotel with a man who registered with her as Mr. and Mrs. John Lee, is dead at the Relief Hospital. The man, who is thought to be John King, is still unconscious. Her husband sobbingly forgave her before she died.

LONDON'S MANY HOMELESS.

A census of the homeless of London, made on a recent night, revealed a total of 2,481 in the streets, on staircases and under arches. Of these, 2,169 were men and 312 women. In the common lodging houses and shelters that night there were 23,690 persons.

BISHOP'S DAUGHTER WEDS AT CAMBRIDGE TO-DAY

BRIDE IN TO-DAY'S SOCIETY WEDDING.

Miss Julia Lawrence and Morton L. Fearey Are United in Marriage, with Ceremony by Bride's Father, at St. John's Chapel.

Miss Julia Lawrence, daughter of Bishop William Lawrence, and Morton L. Fearey will be married to-day in St. John's Memorial Chapel, Cambridge. While the prominence of the families of both bride and bridegroom makes the affair one of the season's events, there have been only a few bidden to the ceremony.

Bishop Lawrence performs the ceremony, assisted by Dean Hodges. A reception takes place at the Lawrence residence, which is but a short distance from the chapel.

Although the second of the Bishop's five daughters, Miss Julia is the first to wed. She is a brunette, tall and graceful, and is one of the most popular members of the Vincent Club, several of the members of which will attend the ceremony. Her wedding gown is white satin and tulle veil. She will be escorted to the altar by her uncle, Amory Lawrence. Miss Sarah Lawrence is maid of honor.

Mr. Fearey is a New York man, Yale '98, and a member of the Harvard Law School, class of '02.

Mr. Fearey will have as best man W. E. S. Griswold, a Yale classmate, and the ushers are to be entirely Harvard and Yale men, David F. Rogers, Raynal C. Bolling, W. Appleton Lawrence, Clifford D. Cheney, Frank H. Simmons, Langdon P. Marvin and Malcolm Donald.

Mrs. Lawrence is to wear a gray satin and hat to match. The groom's mother is a widow and her health will not permit her attending. Among the guests sure to be there are Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence, Miss "Libby" Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Peter C. Brooks, Justice and Mrs. Loring, Mr. and Mrs. F. VOTING BOOTH IN STREET ILLEGAL

A decision of the full bench of the Supreme Court holds that a voting booth placed in the streets by the Election Commissioners is unlawfully located; that the Board of Aldermen alone have the power to place the booths in the street. The decision was in the case of Mary Haberhill vs. the city of Boston.

The plaintiff sought to recover damages for injuries sustained by coming in contact with an obstruction on a booth in Seventh street, South Boston. The city denied liability. The full bench now holds that the booth was unlawfully placed and sustains the exceptions of the plaintiff.

ALBANIANS BESIEGE MACEDONIAN TOWN

BELGRADE, May 20.—The town of Gulltone, Macedonia, is being besieged by a force of 2,000 Albanians. Eight hundred soldiers took refuge in the town, and the residents have defended them from the Albanians. The latter have threatened to massacre all the inhabitants when they capture the place. Relief for the beleaguered town has been ordered from Uskub and a force will be sent at once.

HONORED HEAD MASTER.

GRANITE STATE CHILDREN ARE SEEING BOSTON

50 Little Ones From Bristol, N. H., Schools Are Touring City and Vicinity.

STUDY HISTORICAL SCENES

Fifty school children of Bristol, N. H., who are in Boston making a tour of the city and suburbs, left the Copley square hotel at 7:30 o'clock to-day, for their second day's outing. A special car is being used by the party, and the first place visited to-day was the Perkins Institution for the Blind at South Boston. The special object at the institution was to visit Marion Sibley, an inmate at the institution, who was a schoolmate of the children in Bristol.

Following the visit to the South Boston Institute, the party went through the Back Bay, Roxbury, Brookline, Newton and Cambridge. The buildings of Harvard University were of much interest to the young scholars. Longfellow's home and Washington elm was shown them. The party returned to Boston through East Cambridge, by the courthouses, to Union station, where they took the train for Bristol.

The object of the visit to Boston is to educate the children by letting them see the places of historical interest which they are taught at home and which they read about in the text books. The idea was inaugurated by Miss E. Belle Calley, principal of the Bristol schools, who was in charge of the party.

The party arrived in Boston yesterday and visited the Public Library, Art Museum and the Charlestown Navy Yard. The navy yard was of great interest to them as Bristol is far away from the ocean and many had never had the opportunity to see the salt water. The Old Constitution and battleship Illinois were especially delightful to them. The boys were greatly interested in the armament and the "jackies." Officers and crews were besieged with all manner of questions regarding the big guns, how far they could shoot and how much damage they might do.

[CAR]NEGIE FOR [M]UNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

[Carnegie's] King Says It Would [Ten]d to Purify the Public Service.

[BELIE]VES IN THE PEOPLE

[Special] Cable to Boston American.
[Copyrigh]t, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner.

[LOND]ON, May 20.—Andrew Carnegie, [at the L]angham Hotel in this city, came [out ver]y emphatically in favor of municipal [owne]rship. He declared that the muni[cipal ow]nership of public utilities tends to [the purifi]cation of public life. In the course [of an in]terview with a representative of [the BOS]TON AMERICAN the great iron [master said]:

["Regar]ding municipal ownership, it [would appe]ar to me that whenever a fran[chise inv]olves the creation of a monopoly [...], no perpetual franchise ought to [be granted].

[The cit]y should invariably reserve [the own]ership in a franchise; it [may lea]se it for a short time on [advant]ageous terms, but should [never p]art with the title.

[D]ocks a Good Illustration.

[The] wharves and docks of New York [are the] best illustration of this. The [city own]s those docks and leases them on [t]erms for certain rents, and even [th]e rentals received are more than [enough] to pay the interest on their [cost and] also provide a sinking fund which [in the c]ourse of thirty years, I should [think, w]ill wipe out the entire debt.

[Then] the New York Subway. There [is anothe]r great illustration. It has proved [a] great success and is bound to [be enor]mously profitable as the years [go on.]

[So w]ith gas and electricity. I [do not] know any town or city in [Great B]ritain which does not own [them. W]hether the city leases these [at ag]reed-upon prices to be paid [for gas] and electricity, or whether [the city] undertakes their manufac[ture i]n detail—THE GREAT POINT [IS THA]T A CITY SHOULD ITSELF [OWN] THE GAS AND ELECTRIC [FR]ANCHISES.

Points to Glasgow.

[Look at Glasgow], regarding its tramways—New [York sho]uld control the franchises of these [and be p]repared to take advantage of civic [ownership a]nd make better and better bar[gains, th]at is, exact higher and higher [rentals] for their use.

[Glasgow n]ow has gone a step further and [owns its o]wn telephones. If under the law [New Yor]k can make the telephoning privi[lege a f]ranchise, then New York should [gran]t franchise for a number of years [and take] the telephoning rents as the busi[ness gro]ws more profitable at the end of [each lease]."

["Do yo]u think that municipal ownership [of public] utilities really tends to the purifi[cation of] public life?" asked the AMERI[CAN co]rrespondent.

["Yes,"] immediately replied Mr. Carnegie, [and addin]g he said:

["I am] a great believer in democ[racy, th]at is, the rule of the people. [I believ]e that institutions such as [railway]s, for instance, are far bet[ter m]anaged if subject to city au[thority] than when, as now, they are [subject] to cliques. There is noth[ing lik]e the purifying breath of [public] opinion blowing into all [i]nstitutions."

[The v]erdict was reached in less than [an] hour. Three ballots were taken. [The firs]t ballot was unanimous as to [g]uilt, and then a ballot followed [as to the] punishment to be inflicted. This [sh]owed ten in favor of the death [penalty a]nd two for life imprisonment. A [third bal]lot resulted in the twelve jurors [voting fo]r the death penalty.

How a daring party of American miners have [attacked the] famous old Popocatapetl and [dug] out a hundred million tons of [sulphur] from its crater, with the ever [present] thought that at any moment [i]t may give way beneath them [in an er]uption blow them sky high.

MYSTERY OF DESERTED BRIDE STILL UNSOLVED

MISS ISABELLA BALLARD—AUTOGRAPHIC STUDIO 1905

GIRL WHO WAS DESERTED ON WEDDING EVE.

William De Ellis, Missing Bridegroom, Temporarily Insane, Thinks Sister; Others Fear Foul Play.

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of William W. DeEllis of Readville on the eve of the day set for his wedding to Miss Isabella Ballard of Hyde Park has excited the inhabitants of Hyde Park, Needham, Dedham and Readville, where the principals are well known.

Friends and relatives of the young man are about evenly divided in their opinions as to the possibilities of foul play and temporary insanity, but are strong in their denunciations of DeEllis's actions.

For several weeks past Miss Ballard has been preparing her trousseau. Two weeks ago DeEllis engaged a suite at No. 78 Sprague street, Readville, from Mrs. Fred H. Holmes.

The young people have been very close friends for three years. Their engagement was announced some two months ago.

DeEllis pleaded with his betrothed for an early marriage. This, for some reason, was deferred by Miss Ballard from time to time until finally, with much reluctance, the date for the wedding was set for Wednesday.

On Monday evening last, the groom-to-be appeared at the home of his affianced bride, apparently in the best of spirits. Plans were made for a trip to Boston the next day in order to change the wedding ring, which DeEllis discovered on that evening was too small. Miss Ballard waited for DeEllis all the next day and far into the evening, but he did not appear.

Suspect Foul Play.

Several friends of DeEllis have expressed their opinions that some one must have learned that he was to draw a large sum of money from the bank, that he was set upon, robbed and met with foul play. This theory is scouted by the police, who, however, have no theory to advance.

MILLIONAIRE AND WIFE SEE WRESTLERS

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Thomas Interested Spectators at the Jenkins-Gotch Bout.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Conspicuous among the spectators at the Jenkins-Gotch wrestling match in Madison Square Garden was Mrs. E. R. Thomas, wife of E. R. Thomas, millionaire sportsman, who occupied a box with her husband and a party of friends. From the time the two big men grappled with each other until Jenkins finished his antagonist with a double nelson at a quarter after 1 o'clock to-day Mrs. Thomas showed keen interest in the match, and frequently clapped her gloved hands in applause for the wrestlers' skill.

Sporting men say that the bout was the roughest of the kind they have seen for many a day, but this did not in the least disturb Mrs. Thomas. She seemed to enjoy it as much as she would a quiet play, or perhaps it would be better to say she enjoyed it more, for she is a lover of sports in all forms and has been her husband's constant companion at the race tracks and on his lightning automobile runs throughout the country.

In boxes around the Thomas box were a great many theatrical people, bankers, racing men and pugilists. Tom Sharkey was there with a large following.

Mr. Thomas did not appear at all worried over his coming trial for violating the speed ordinance, though there has been some threat to send him to prison.

BOWDOIN ALUMNAE MEET.

Several hundred alumnae and pupils of the Bowdoin School for Girls, Myrtle street, attended a reunion of the school at the Hotel Vendome. Mrs Lue Stuart Wadsworth, class of '75, presided. Speeches were made, and a program of music and recitations was given.

POLICE CHIEF FINED $10 FOR MIX-UP ON CAR

Charge Brought by Conductor, Who Was Clearing Way for Woman.

BROOKFIELD, May 20.—Chief of Police William Fenton to-day was fined $10 for assault and battery upon a street car conductor. He pleaded not guilty. Fenton appealed.

Fenton's arraignment was the result of his trying to stop a disturbance on a car. With the conductor, Edward Sauler, he was standing in the vestibule of a Warren, Brookfield and Spencer car, when a lady stopped the car and was about to enter. A young fellow named Frank Moore stood in the door, interfering with the passenger's entrance.

Sauler took Moore by the arm, and shoved him to one side. Moore resented the conductor's manner, and in a second the two were in a mix-up. Chief Fenton jumped between the two men and separated them. Some words followed, and Sauler said he would charge the chief with assault and battery.

ACCUSED OF THEFT OF MILEAGE BOOKS

John J. Murphy, twenty-two years of age, was before Judge Bruce in the Malden District Court to-day, charged with breaking and entering the Tufts College station of the Boston & Maine railroad last Thursday and the larceny of enough tickets to enable him to travel 6,700 miles. Murphy pleaded not guilty and was held in $1,000 for hearing May 26.

JEROME WILL TRY TO DISBAR 'ABE' HUMMEL

Charges Filed With Bar Association Growing Out of the Dodge-Mason Case.

NEW YORK, May 20.—A sensation was caused in legal circles when it became known to-day that charges have been lodged with the Bar Association asking that Abraham H. Hummel, one of the most widely known lawyers in the country, be disbarred. The complainant is District Attorney William Travers Jerome.

The whole thing will probably be thrashed out on Tuesday next before Justice Davy in the Supreme Court, Criminal Branch. DeLancey Nicoll, counsel for Mr. Hummel, has served notice on District Attorney Jerome that he would move before Justice Davy on that day to have dismissed the three indictments against Mr. Hummel—two for subornation of perjury and one for conspiracy.

Mr. Jerome filed the charges against Mr. Hummel with the grievance committee of the Bar Association a long time ago—soon after Charles F. Dodge was indicted for perjury, it was said, and not long after Mr. Jerome began his investigation of the Dodge-Morse case.

So far the committee has taken no action, although it was hinted when Charles F. Dodge was brought back from Texas that he would be examined. It is said that nothing will be done by the Bar Association pending the outcome of the criminal proceedings against Hummel.

Mr. Nicoll would not make public the notice he served on the District Attorney. It is understood, however, that in his argument Mr. Nicoll will go at some length into the charges Mr. Jerome has made to the Bar Association. Mr. Nicoll will insist that the only reason Mr. Jerome wants to try Mr. Hummel is to attempt to bring out something that can be used to substantiate those charges.

The conspiracy charges against Mr. Hummel also involve ex-Justice Edgar L. Fursman, Benjamin Steinhardt, Edward E. Bracken, a private detective who followed Dodge in Texas, and Dodge, Steinhardt and Hummel are also jointly indicted for subornation of perjury.

LONE WOMAN FOUND SLAIN

WOODBURY, N. J., May 20.—Lying in a pool of her own blood, the blackened corpse of Miss Margaret Bradley, an elderly and eccentric spinster, who conducted a small farm about a mile and a half from Franklinville County, N. J., has been found.

There was every indication that the woman had been murdered, although a cursory examination failed to show any wounds.

The house had evidently been ransacked and as the recluse was commonly reported to be a miser, it is believed murder followed the perpetration of a robbery. There were indications of a struggle. The Gloucester county authorities are making a search for the supposed slayers of the woman.

EAST BOSTON MEN TO MEET MAYOR MAY 25

The conference between Mayor Collins and a committee from the East Boston Citizens' Trade Association, headed by Ex-Governor Bates, which was set for 11 o'clock to-day, has been postponed until 2 o'clock Thursday, May 25. The conference is to be on the proposed relief hospital, the order for which was vetoed by the Mayor.

LAWSON REVEALS FIRST "AMALGAMATED CRIME"

AUTHOR OF "FRENZIED FINANCE" CHARGES GIGANTIC STEAL IN STOCK ALLOTMENT.

In the current number of Everybody's Magazine, which is out to-day, Thomas W. Lawson resumes his story of "Frenzied Finance" and sets forth what he calls "the first great crime of Amalgamated." This crime, he declares, was committed by the Standard Oil Company and the National City Bank in New York City.

In his article Mr. Lawson devotes a great deal of space to the midnight scene in the great banking house, where the subscription allotment was made and the fraud perpetrated, according to Mr. Lawson, by which, contrary to the pledges to the public, each subscriber was deprived of his proper proportion of the stock by the introduction of a bogus subscription.

In explaining this feature of the case, Mr. Lawson in his article says:

How the Scheme Worked.

"For instance, a man who applied for a hundred shares accompanied his subscription with a check for $500. He was allotted twenty shares, value $2,000, on which his $500 check represented a payment of 25 per cent. If the conditions of the National City Bank's advertisement had been complied with, he was absolutely entitled to three shares of every five subscribed for, or sixty in all.

"To bring about the proportion which Mr. Rogers wanted, a bogus subscription of five or six times the unallotted balance was put in by him, and this is where the fraud was committed. The National City Bank was in duty bound to protect the public from any such bogus subscription, and to see that fair treatment was accorded to all subscribers.

Eleven Hours After Opening Bids.

"Yet, unfaithful to the trust, it permitted this bogus subscription to be put in, eleven hours after the bids had been opened. It utterly failed to comply with the conditions of its advertisement, and was thus a direct party to the fraud perpetrated by its president and Mr. Rogers.

"The exact amount of the bogus subscription could not be decided until the exact figures of the subscriptions had been compiled, so the figures I gave out that night were only estimates. Within the next few days it was ascertained that the genuine subscriptions totaled $132,067,500, upon which an allotment of one share in five, or $26,413,500 of stock altogether, was made to the public.

"In this way the conspirators secured from the public $26,413,500 of the original cost, $39,000,000, and yet retained over $48,500,000 of the authorized stock of $75,000,000. In other words the public paid two-thirds of the purchase price, and the conspirators retained nearly two-thirds of the property.

"Considerations of space forbid my treating here the immediate disastrous results of the crime, the death-pall that fell upon the market, the pitiable plight of the subscribers, the brutal insensibility of "Standard Oil" to the frightful situation its treachery had caused.

Deprived of Two Shares Each.

"The fraud thus perpetrated amounts to this: Every subscriber legally entitled to three shares of Amalgamated stock was deprived of two of them by the National City Bank, and the proof is to be found in the books of said National City Bank. My readers may say here that this constitutes a fortunate condition rather than a crime to be punished, for the less Amalgamated a man had, the better he was off, as the stock afterward declined. This conclusion is a false one, however.

Matter of Mathematics.

"The first crime of Amalgamated is a matter of mathematics. It involved plain fraud and misrepresentation, the insertion of a bogus subscription and the disruption of solemn pledges, but the commission of it was a mere matter of arrangement between two men, one the master of the greatest of all business organizations, and the other the head of the strongest bank in the United States. The consequences were world wide. That night no bomb was thrown, but a seed was sown for the cruelest harvest of crime, dishonor, unhappiness and desolation ever reaped within the confines of our Republic.

"The National City Bank is plainly liable for violation of the published stipulations under which subscriptions were allotted, and it is common knowledge that the stock was allotted one share in five subscribed for, while the original list of subscriptions shows that the total allotment was less than twenty-seven millions and the full subscription less than double the amount to be allotted.

Calls on Government to Act.

"It is common knowledge that the dividends were cut to 2 per cent., and are at the present time, the best ever known in the copper business, only 1 per cent., and that they have been cut under 8 per cent., so they could not have been 12 to 16 per cent. at the time it was stated they were, or there has been great fraud committed since; and that as we are dealing with the greatest National Bank in the country, it will be simple for the Government and banking officials at Washington instantly to disprove my statements if they are false; otherwise they must take action, civil and criminal, against the National City Bank.

"However one looked at the situation, it was evident that Henry H. Rogers and William Rockefeller were playing for the stake of their lives, though how great the stake was no one at that time guessed. Since then they have steadily forged ahead, both in riches and in influence, until to-day they have actually supplanted John D. Rockefeller in the kingship of finance. Then, though his had always been the mastermind of "Standard Oil," I don't believe Mr. Rogers was worth, all told, over twelve or fifteen millions, while to-day he is probably a hundred and fifty times a millionaire."

'THE WOMAN IN BLACK' CAUGHT AT ALBANY, N. Y.

Noted Woman Burglar, Guilty of Many Crimes, Again Under Arrest.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 20.—The Albany police have in custody the first woman burglar in the history of the local department and believe that they have captured a noted criminal. She is known in the department records as Lillian Goodman and is charged with robbing a North Pearl street flat.

The prisoner is known to the Buffalo police as Annie Alexander, alias Hazel Johnson, alias Mary Smith, alias "the Woman in Black." She was sent to the Western Penitentiary, Pennsylvania, on May 10, 1894, for eleven years for larceny and receiving stolen property and was discharged on July 13, 1901, after serving seven years. She was also sent to Auburn Prison on September 22, 1901, for burglary of flats. It is reported that during the brief interval that she was out of prison she did forty jobs in Buffalo.

The woman has been held for the Grand Jury on the charge of grand larceny. She admits her guilt, expresses no regret for her series of remarkable crimes, and says she will never be able to break away from her career of crime. "I always take a dose of morphine before I do a job," she says. "It braces me up wonderfully, and I have no fear."

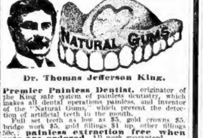

The woman is thirty-eight years of age.

$27,000,000 IN FEDERAL VAULT

In the vaults of the local sub-treasury in the postoffice building nearly $27,000,000 in good gold and silver coins, bank notes and certificates, is on deposit to the credit of Uncle Sam. The statement mailed to Secretary Shaw by Assistant Treasurer Marden to-day shows in total assets on hand $26,932,550.28.

Over half of this amount, $15,912,068, is in gold coin; then comes gold certificates amounting to $8,077,550. There are 1,990,475 silver dollars. The balance is in silver certificates, national bank notes, subsidiary silver coins, coupons, checks and other coin. There are on hand 2,218,072 pennies.

SHAW LAYS CLEVELAND CORNERSTONE

CLEVELAND, May 20.—Secretary of the Treasury Shaw laid the cornerstone of the new Federal building here this afternoon. Congressman T. E. Burton made the principal address on "City, State and Country." Secretary Shaw told of the position of the United States in the commerce of the world and the country's prosperity. He said:

"We have prospered as no other people in the world. We have more miles of railroad and enjoy the lowest freight rates of any. We have the largest and the best coastwise trade of which there is any history.

"Our people are better housed, better fed, better clothed, better educated, and should be better contented than any. There was never a time in our own history when each and every separate class of our people were as prosperous as now. The farmer and merchant, manufacturer, artisan and laborer, all find plenty of employment, and with returns as commensurate with the effort put forth as at any other period."

The Chamber of Commerce will give a banquet to-night, at which Secretary Shaw and Japanese Minister Takahira will speak.

"L" VERDICT IS SET ASIDE

Under a decision handed down by the full bench of the Supreme Court the Boston Elevated railway is not compelled to have a guard on elevated trains to warn passengers of the space between cars. The decision sets aside a verdict of $2,000 awarded Miss Annie Falkins by a jury before Judge Holmes, who sued the company for damages resulting from a fall between two cars of an elevated train.

NAME 'DUMMY' DIRECTORS IN EQUITABLE

STARTLING NEW CHARGES

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 20.—For the first time in a court of record the names of the alleged "dummy" directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society have been made public in a suit brought by Mary S. Young, a policy holder and the owner of one share of the stock, for an accounting and the restoration of the funds of the association, which, she charges, have been wrongfully used.

In this suit, brought by State Senator Brackett as counsel for Mrs. Young, filed in Saratoga County, new charges are made against the officers and the directors. It is alleged that, in addition to the other wrongful acts of those intrusted with the care of millions belonging to the policy holders, the funds of the Equitable have been used to settle claims against individual directors growing out of the shipbuilding scandal. The names of these directors are not made public.

Salary Too Large.

The increases in the salary of James H. Hyde until it reached $100,000 a year are told and a demand made that this money be returned to the Equitable, as it is declared he has rendered no adequate service for this enormous salary, which he was able to obtain through the control of a majority of the stock and the naming of the directors.

Charges in regard to the use of the society's money for the payment of personal help of Mr. Hyde at his country place in Bay shore, at his place in Paris and his quarters in this city are reiterated.

A new charge in connection with the real estate of the society is made. It is alleged that certain real estate holdings were leased to restaurants at a lower figure than they should have been, owing to the interests of Mr. Hyde.

"Paid Personal Expenses."

The old charge in regard to the rental of the Mercantile Trust Company quarters are reiterated and the story of the Cambon dinner is again referred to.

The startling charge is made that money was drawn from the society funds for the personal expenses of Mr. Hyde, and the only voucher to show for this was one put in by Mr. Hyde and approved by him without any itemized account.

Virtually Mr. Hyde, it is charged, drew the money and placed his own "O. K." on the voucher.

Another allegation is that large sums of money have been paid out of the Equitable for the personal travelling expenses of Mr. Hyde and his friends.

Names of "Dummies."

The names are: George J. Gould, James J. Hill, August Belmont, Edward H. Harriman, Levi P. Morton, Henry C. Frick, Alexander J. Cassatt, Louis Fitzgerald, William A. Wheelock, Henry C. Deming, George H. Squire, Charles Steward Smith, Valentine P. Snyder, Alvin W. Krech, James B. Forgan, C. Ledyard Blair, Brayton Ives, Melville E. Ingalls, Jacob H. Schiff, Alfred C. Vanderbilt, John Jacob Astor, William C. Van Horne, Henry Rogers Winthrop, Marvin Hughitt, Marcellus H. Dodge, Bradish Johnson, Joseph T. Low, Darius O. Mills, Robert T. Lincoln, John Sloane, George T. Wilson, Thomas T. Eckert, William H. McIntyre, H. C. Haarstick, David H. Moffatt, T. Jefferson Coolidge, Cornelius N. Bliss.

SPANISH WAR ORDER MEETS

National Commandery Naval and Military Order of the Spanish War is holding its annual session in this city to-day. General Embury B. Clark, commander of the First Brigade, M. V. M., is the head of the national body. He was Colonel of the Second Massachusetts Infantry during the Spanish-American War.

Thirty delegates from six States were at the Parker House at noon, when luncheon was served. A business meeting in the Cadet Armory on Columbus avenue follows, and to-night there is a dinner at the Exchange Club. To-morrow the visitors take an automobile ride to Concord and Lexington.

PRESIDENT GREETS COLORED METHODISTS

WASHINGTON, May 20.—President Roosevelt gave a reception at noon to-day to the delegates to the Philadelphia and Baltimore conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church. The ministers and their friends to the number of more than 100 were each given a word of greeting and a handshake. After the reception the visitors were escorted through the state parlors of the White House.

FIRST SACKER MUST BE DEATH ON ALL THROWS

How to Play Baseball--No. 3

HOW TO PLAY FIRST BASE—BY MYRON T. GRIMSHAW.

A satisfactory first baseman must posses several qualifications to fill the position. Physically he must have reach to scoop in the wide throws that come from all parts of the diamond to the bag, whether digging them out of the ground or picking them off high in the air or at full length at right or left. No matter where they come, the baseman is expected to get them, and his ability to do so usually classifies the player.

In many ways the first sack is one of the most difficult to cover on account of it being on the left side of a player, which makes it awkward for him till he gets used to the position. He must always be ready to field his position when anything comes his way, and when the base is occupied is on the jump to keep the runner hugging the bag and still take care of the space allotted to him. He should co-operate with the second baseman as well as the pitcher in handling all plays that come within their scope in which he can be a factor.

Keep One Foot on Base.

A first baseman must learn to keep one foot on the base when he is taking throws and it should become natural for him to have it fastened so as not to take any of his attention off in receiving the ball.

It should be like second nature for him to be always connected with the corner when a fielder is assisting to him. When a wild throw is made that is going astray it is policy to step off the bag rather than take chances of it benefiting the runner.

A baseman can handle slow hits toward the base when the pitcher or even the second baseman will cover the bag and in the case where third base is occupied and less than two out he plays in like the other infielders to shut off the run on a ground hit.

A clever play for first baseman to work when a grounder is hit towards him and a man running to second, is to pass to the shortstop, who would naturally cover the middle bag, and then get back to his base to receive the return in time to complete a double play.

It is best to play well back of the baseline so that everything to the left foul line can be captured, as anything through that space would likely go safe, while on the right the second baseman is playing farther back and would take it.

In taking a sharp hit ground ball well back of the base, toss to the pitcher, aiming to have both meet at the base together. A ball tossed is much easier to handle when the pitcher is under full speed than one thrown, and the impact is neutralized.

After Receiving a Throw.

After receiving a throw the baseman should get into throwing position himself immediately, as a fast runner will try to get a big lead away from some other base.

The guardian of the bag has plenty of throwing to do, as well as being the main receiving end of the infielders' assists, and has many chances to cut off a man running to third, when the ball must be driven across the diamond on a line true to the mark.

He must be death on thrown balls, as a first baseman who is weak in that direction would be of little use to his team.

He has considerable handling of fouls out of reach of the catcher to the right, and should be able to pull these down, no matter how far up in the air they might be.

At the bat he is a factor, and his value to a team is considerably enhanced if he is a good sticker.

The next article on "How to Play Baseball" will appear in the BOSTON AMERICAN on Monday.

YANGER BROKE HIS ARM

BALTIMORE, May 20.—The Benny Yanger-Harry Lewis bout, scheduled for fifteen rounds, before the Eureka Athletic Club at the Fourth Regiment Armory had an untimely ending in the first round as a result of Yanger breaking his left arm.

The round was a sizzler and looked well for a slashing contest. Both boys went at each other in good fast style and the honors were even.

Three physicians examined the arm and all agreed that it was broken. Unedr the conditions there was nothing for Referee "Jim" O'Hara to do but to give Lewis the decision.

GRIMSHAW OF THE CHAMPS

This picture of Grimshaw was taken before the Champs left on their Western trip. Since he has occupied first base "Grim" has been batting well and also fielding his position in first-class shape.

Grimshaw has written a special article for the Boston American on "How to Play First Base." It appears on this page to-day, and shows how thorough a student he is of the game.

JACK ROOT AFTER JEFFRIES'S TITLE

CHICAGO, May 20.—First of the pugilists in line for the heavyweight championship of the world to go out after the crown worn by James J. Jeffries—save the old story that Frank Gotch is after the honor—comes the news that Jack Root has issued a sweeping challenge to all who feel that they have a claim to the title of champion of the world.

Unless Fitz accepts Root's challenge, the Bohemian's first opponent will be Marvin Hart. Though there have been no articles signed yet, it is well understood that Hart and Root will meet on July 4. Before what club these two men are to meet is kept a secret, though it is believed that they will journey to Fort Erie.

Root has not been in a battle since the closing of the local fight game, but has missed little training. He can be seen on the road almost every morning. He is in the best of condition and says he feels better than ever before.

Will Meet Hart in July.

In speaking of the fight with Hart, he says: "I beat Hart once, and believe I can do it again. He is considerable bigger now than when I fought him, but this does not worry me in the least. I have improved wonderfully in the last year, and with Jeffries on the retired list I stand ready to meet any man in the world.

"There is some talk about this man Gotch entering the fight for the championship. This fellow looks to me like Munroe looked to Jeff, and if I can get some club to match us I will prove what I have just said. As it now stands, I prefer to meet either Fitz or Hart first, and then go along taking up all comers.

"Jeffries, when retiring, would not give his title away. He said he had to earn it and he wants the one who wears it next to get it in the same way. He does not believe in ready-made champions. Likewise, I do not believe in ready-made champs.

"Save Fitz, I have beaten almost every man who has a claim to the title. This is a fair record, a record on which others would put themselves at the head of the list and say, 'I am the champion of the world.' I have whipped all in my class. But none of that talk for me. Every fighter is entitled to a fair chance, and not until all who meet me have fallen before me will I say I am champion. I will say, however, that I feel that within a year I can wear the crown." Root will train harder from now on than ever before.

Harvard Freshman Crew to Enter American Henley

Nothing was heard as the result of the Harvard interclass races except praise for the sterling work of the Crimson freshman crew, which won the event and which in the Yale-Harvard regatta to be held in June at New London will race the 1908 crew, and the pluck of H. B. Webster of the senior crew. The time, 9 minutes and 19 seconds made by the freshman eight was within three seconds of record time for the course, which was a mile and seven eighths, the same that will be rowed in the Cornell race a week from to-day except that the race was rowed down stream instead of up stream.

Webster Got Cold Bath.

Webster got a very cold bath and ran considerable chance of being badly hurt when he jumped overboard, after having broken his oar midway in the race. The senior crew was a close second to the freshman as it started to go through the draw under the Harvard bridge. The launch "John Harvard" was following close behind at a terrific rate. Suddenly Webster's oar cracked and broke clean off at the oar lock. Without a second's hesitancy Webster leaped from the shell with the big launch bearing straight down upon him. The "John Harvard" was instantly backed full speed and veered to one side, so that she ran into the pier with a glancing blow. Webster came to the surface just by the bow of the launch and was quickly seized and dragged aboard.

Meanwhile the race went merrily on, with the freshmen gaining at every stroke. With only seven men in the boat the seniors kept pluckily at it, but were forced to accept last place, with 1908 first, 1907 second, 1906 third.

Amberg Also Broke His Oar.

Amberg, seven in the freshman boat, broke his oar just as his boat shot across the line, but it was too late to do any harm.

The freshmen would undoubtedly have won had the seniors not lost Webster, as 1908 had a substantial lead when the accident occurred and was gaining. Their victory is a feather in Coach Wray's bonnet, as he coached the 1908 crew and none of the others. The freshmen will go to the American Henley as the result of this race, as the Harvard representative in the junior eight event.

The order of the winning boat: Morgan, stroke; Amberg, 7; Fish, 6; Warren, 5; Richardson, 4; Fahnestock, 3; Ball, 2; Wiggins, bow; Arnold, coxswain.

FOOTBALL:

Manager Goodhue of the football eleven to-day announced the Harvard varsity football schedule for next year. The Crimson eleven will play one more game next season than last. No game will be played with Columbia, as the Blue and White management insisted that the game, if it was arranged, be played in New York. This Coach Reid was not willing to do, with the result that Brown is to be played at Cambridge on October 28, instead of the Morningside aggregation. Brown was not played last year. Harvard has reverted to the order of two years ago in the arrangement of the last three games on her schedule. Dartmouth will be played at Cambridge the Saturday before the Yale game and Pennsylvania will be played the week preceding Dartmouth.

A game has been arranged with the Springfield Training School for the first time this year. Two games will be played away from Cambridge, West Point and Penn at Philadelphia.

The schedule:

Saturday, September 30—Williams.
Wednesday, October 4—Bowdoin.
Saturday, October 7—University of Maine.
Wednesday, October 11—Bates.
Saturday, October 14—Springfield Training School.
Saturday, October 21—West Point, at West Point.
Saturday, October 28—Brown.
Saturday, November 4—Indians.
Saturday, November 11—University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia.
Saturday, November 18—Dartmouth.
Saturday, November 25—Yale.

ELIGIBILITY RULE:

The Harvard Crimson, the college daily, was out yesterday with a strong editorial denial of the charges in the New York newspapers that by the new eligibility rule between Harvard and Yale, whereby athletes who had taken money previous to their nineteenth year might be reinstated by the college authorities, they were committing themselves to professional athletics.

The editorial points out that only minor offences are to be so treated, and that the money prize must have been accepted at least four years before the time of the reinstatement.

The editorial concludes:

"As all Yale and Harvard men know and as any one with a fair amount of intelligence could see, the amendment is intended only to modify the absurd rule which would bar a man from athletics because, for example, he had as a boy received from his father a prize of 10 cents for a race around a city block. The dual agreement amendment was simply another wording of a rule passed by the Harvard committee last June.

The rule has been applied in just one instance, when last January, the committee reinstated a freshman who had some seven years before took part in a 100-yard-dash on the Fourth of July and received a money prize of one dollar.

Such is the rule which papers which have enjoyed a reputation for accuracy and fairness and a man who claims to stand for the elevation of amateur sport are pleased to call "the worst thing that could befall amateur athletics." Despite their fears, however, and the twistings of facts and their distrust of the intentions, Yale and Harvard will continue to set for amateur sports, high standards which the public will understand in time, and which the athletic unions and associations of the country will seek to approach as closely as they may."

GOTCH CAN BOX, SAYS KID M'COY

Frank Gotch, the young Iowa wrestler who aspires to the heavyweight fighting championship of the world, had his first real test as a boxer yesterday when he met Kid McCoy in a three-round exhibition. Gotch showed up well in his lively bout with the Hoosier, who, without doubt, is one of the most skilful exponents of the manly art, and those who witnessed Gotch's performance were of the opinion that in him there is good material for a first-rate fighter.

McCoy himself was surprised at the showing made by Gotch, and, while he acknowledges that Gotch is far from a champion at the present time, he believes that in time he will make his mark in the ring.

Gotch showed several good points in his bout. He showed that he was not averse to taking a wallop and that he had a good punch himself, whenever an opportunity presented itself. McCoy, with his crafty, shifting tactics, was the hardest kind of game a man like Gotch could encounter, but the Westerner knew this when he started out, and was willing to take a wallop in an effort to reach his opponent.

McCoy set a pretty fast pace for Gotch in the first round, and had him puffing at the finish, but neither man did any damage. In the second round Gotch uncovered his favorite wallop, when he sent a hard right hand hook to McCoy's jaw.

McCoy, of course, did not try to put his man out, but he sent home some hard short arm jolts, and Gotch stood them well. McCoy used his left hand jab several times in the second round, but Gotch simply rushed in, paying little attention to the effect of the blow, and sending across his right hand swing.

Lively Round.

The third round was another lively affair, McCoy cutting out the pace and making Gotch do some lively blocking and side-stepping to get out of danger. Gotch did most of his effective work at close quarters, notwithstanding the fact that he has a reach as great as that of McCoy. After the bout McCoy said that he believed that Gotch would make a good fighter, and that he thought that Gotch was a much better man for the ring than Munroe; that he possessed a good punch and was fast on his feet.

"Gotch is very clever on his feet," said McCoy, "and he has a very good wallop. I see no reason why he should not become a fighter, and a pretty good one, at that. Of course, I don't say that he can defeat Jeffries right off the reel, but if he sticks to the game long enough, he will be a hard man to beat. He has a fighter's heart. He is not afraid to punch a fellow. The great trouble with Munroe is that he is afraid to punch out when he gets to close quarters. I should advise Gotch to take on some of the lighter men first, and if he is successful, he can then work himself up to the top in a very short time."

JEFFRIES SAYS HART WOULD MAKE FITZ DO HIS BEST

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20.—James J. Jeffries, ex-champion of the world, is here on his first visit. Been here before, has he? Well, yes, but not as ex-champion. We have had Jeffries, the coming champion, and Jeffries, champion of the world, but this is the first time ex-Champion Jeffries has loomed up among us.

As a rule, in the case of a pugilistic celebrity, the prefix "ex" conjures up visions of lost prestige, fond hopes dashed and changes in the Queensberry Blue Book.

But there are no heart scaldings connected with Jeffries's laying down of the title. It is purely a commercial proposition. He needs the money, and there is no money in remaining champion. All the thought he gave to training and all the energy he infused to uppercuts and cross-counters will be transferred to some other field of endeavor.

Malaria Attacks Him.

Jeffries does not look well. While not an invalid exactly, there is something about him which suggests that he needs thorough soaking with California sunshine and a renewal of acquaintance with the balsamic breezes of the ranges.

"They tell me I have malaria," said Jeff. "Guess I picked it up while showing through Germany and the Southern country. I have not got rheumatism, as reported. A doctor in the East told me that there was too much confinement about the theatrical business for me and that what I wanted was a little life in the open air. I knew it before he told me so, for that matter. It seemed to me while following the Davy Crockett route I was cooped up in railways carriages half the time, the other half housed in stuffy theatres. I am through with all that as well as with the fighting business.

I have only been in San Francisco a couple of hours, and I am feeling better already. I will stay here a week and then go to Los Angeles, which to me means 'Home Sweet Home.' There I will rest and form my plans. I am interested in a couple of mines, but it won't be necessary to give the whole of my time looking after them. The ideal life for me is that of a rancher. I have made up my mind just what kind of a place I want, and every time I go out in the hills I will be on the lookout for it. I may find it in Southern California, and I may come across it in the northern part of the State. It must be in California, though, for I wouldn't live anywhere else."

"And you're sure you are through with the ring?" asked the writer.

"Yes, sir."

"Have you any suggestions to make as to what should be done about the championship?"

Suggests Fitz vs. Hart.

"I think some of the fellows who hanker after it should get together and arrange a match for it. They needn't fear that I will butt in on their plans. Fitzsimmons I consider well qualified to make a bid for the title again. I believe he made a poor fight here with George Gardner, but know what I am talking about when I say Fitz was not a well man at that time. I do not say he could do as well as ever he could, but I am satisfied he can put up a better battle to-day than he did with Gardner."

"And who do you think would be a suitable opponent for Fitz?"

"There you go, trying to make me outline what should be done. The championship's not a deed of gift, and I'm not Carnegie. Since you ask me, though, I should say that this young Kentuckian, Marvin Hart, would be able to make Fitzsimmons extend himself. I would consider a match between them a first-class card, in fact, and an event that would arouse plenty of interest."

"How about Gotch and Hackenschmidt, the big wrestler men, who are talking about breaking into pugilism?"

"I don't think it's possible to make much of a fighter out of a wrestler, especially when the wrestler has been years at the game and has been trained to use his strength in the manner called for by that kind of sport. It seems to me there isn't much prospect of a wrestler becoming the world's champion pugilist."

"Now, just once more, Jeff. Do you cast adrift from this championship without stipulation or reservation? Is there a kind of contingency, so far as you know, that would bring you back into the lists?"

"Well, now I'll tell you," said Jeffries, laughing, "if it should so happen that some foreigner came over here and whipped all our men and was about to start back to his own country with the championship belt tucked away under his arm, I believe I'd holler after him: 'Hold on, young fellow. Guess I'll take a whirl at you myself.'

"Unless something like that comes to pass, I hardly think I'll pull a boxing glove over my knuckles again."

BLADE WORK OF CORNELL EIGHT RAGGED

Special to the Boston American.

ITHACA, May 20.—The first variation in the makeup of the Cornell oars since the selections for the races on May 27 were made the early part of the week came last night. Adams, the stroke of the junior crew that will row in the American Henley, and who is one of the strongest and steadiest oarsmen in the boat, failed to report for practice because of illness.

King, who has been stroking the varsity four-oared combination, was used in Adams's position. Whether Adams will be able to return to his seat is not known, but the loss of only a few days at this time would be seriously felt.

The varsity eight was given another six-mile endurance test with less favorable results than last night. The blade work was extremely ragged, and several in the boat had difficulty in keeping up the perfect rythm needed for good results.

A lively scrap for one mile was held between the first freshmen eight and the second varsity, in which the latter won by a length.

GOODMAN WANTS ANOTHER MATCH WITH MEXICAN

There are some interesting facts in the aftermath of the Herrera-Goodman battle and they all tend to the same opinion that the pair will come together again.

Goodman has no kick coming over the decision against him, as a win now stands to the credit of each and it will take a third contest to really settle who is the better boy. Goodman is determined to get on another match, and says he will follow the Mexican to Butte if necessary to make him face him. Immediately after the bout Goodman's first words were a request for another match and the Mexican consented, and it was left with a verbal understanding that they should meet again.

From the purse end of the bout the Kid faired the better, as he got double what the Mexican received, and the latter was allowed to make his own terms.

In order to get another match Goodman will let the Mexican dictate his own terms and will go him any amount on the side that he will put up. Herrera made as much as his guarantee by betting on himself at the odds quoted, which helped him out a lot.

JENKINS WON OVER GOTCH

NEW YORK, May 20.—The catch-as-catch-can wrestling match between Tom Jenkins of Cleveland, O., and Frank Gotch of Humboldt, Ia., contested at Madison Square Garden, resulted in a clean victory for Jenkins, who won two out of three falls.

NELSON MAY MEET LEWIS AFTER ALL

Special to the Boston American.

BALTIMORE, May 20.—Manager Al Herford of the Eureka Athletic and Social Club is in New York, and while there will endeavor to arrange a deal whereby Battling Nelson, who arrived in Philadelphia Tuesday afternoon, will be seen in the roped arena in this city in the near future. Manager Al met him on the train on the way to the Quaker City, and it is thought that matters were practically arranged while on the steel flyer.

The battling Dane is down for a battle with Willie Lewis Monday night, in the Quaker town, but word has reached here that he has welched on the match, evidently fearing Willie Lewis.

As regards the other contestants for the Chicago lad in the Pepsy town, there is some doubt. Harry Lewis is down on the cards for a battle with Benny Yanger in this city to-night at the Fourth Regiment Armory, before the Eureka Athletic and Social Club, and practically all depends upon its result whether or not Harry Lewis will have the much-sought-for opportunity of getting a little six-round seance with the battling Dane.

Yanger and Lewis both report themselves ready for to-night's fray. They have been going on in their work in conscientious style for the past week and will undoubtedly put up a corking battle. If their past dope counts for anything that will surely be the case.

VESPER CREW IS GETTING IN SHAPE

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, May 20.—Dempsey, the coach of the Vesper Boat Club eight, is getting his men into condition with daily practice.

Yesterday the crew, with Exley stroke, Armstrong 7, Williams 6, Lott 5, Flanigan 4, Schell 3, Gleason 2, Lockwood bow and Ayres coxswain, was taken as far as the trolley bridge on the Schuylkill River at Philadelphia. Particular attention was taken by Coach Dempsey to the blade and body work. No hard work was permitted.

On the run down the river a spurt was made for a mile, and then the crew was allowed to row at a moderate pace, rhythm and unison of catch and slide being the main objects. When the club float was reached the men realized that, while the half-hour's work had been beneficial, it had not been irksome.

All seemed bent on doing their best to reach a stage of perfection in stroke, and in doing so the labor had not been exhaustive. Each day marks an improvement in the crew's work. Slowly, but surely, the stroke is being mastered which it is hoped will bring victory at Henley.

TOLEDO, Ohio, May 20.—The Champs are on their way to St. Louis to open this afternoon a four-game series with McAleer's Browns. The team is due at 1:50 o'clock in the afternoon, and as it is usually late there promises to be a hustle to get to the ball grounds. In case there is any delay in arriving the players will dress on the train and a bus will meet them at Big Bridge and drive them to the grounds. This scheme will save forty minutes.

"Cy" May Pitch To-day.

"Cy" Young will be the pitcher for Boston in the first game with George Winter in the Sunday affair, unless Collins changes his mind and puts in Dinneen on account of the big crowd.

The players are not talking much about that game in Cleveland. The marvelous escape they had from a frightful disaster, when a big, long trolley car crashed into their omnibus, has given them a chance to forget the walloping they received at the hands of the "Naps."

Champs' Thrilling Experience.

It was a thrilling experience, as every one saw the car speeding toward the bus and they all realized that a collision could not be avoided. Burkett was badly shaken up, and he said he was in a trance all through the ball game. He is badly bruised on the legs and back. He was pinned in between the car and the bus, and the players said afterwards they thought he was a "gonner."

Dinneen is bruised, Collins had his hand twisted, Selbach's back was slightly sprained and Criger was shaken up. The others escaped without a mark or a jar. It is a wonder that they were able to play ball at all. All hands hope for better luck in St. Louis, and they are wishing for a spell of real warm weather.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Lajoie at first announced that he would not play. Then he changed his mind and went in.

It was a day of accidents. In addition to the mix up of the Boston players, Jackson, the Cleveland left fielder, had his eye cut in practice. Criger was spiked by Collins and says his wrist was sprained sliding to second base.

It was Stovall's first game for Cleveland this year.

Hess used the spit ball almost without a let up. The Bostons made eleven hits off the delivery.

The errors of the Boston's were all excusable.

Grimshaw and Freeman both strode to the plate after Collins had been retired in the second inning. Grim thought he had been moved up a peg in the batting list.

Hess always goes up in the air in the ninth, and had the score been closer doubtless he would have stayed up longer than he did.

Mrs. Criger will meet her husband when he gets to Chicago. Mrs. Young and Mrs. Selbach have returned to their homes, but Mrs. Ferris is still on the trip.

Criger had an off day and so did Tannehill, but considering what they went through in the trolley car episode they are not to be blamed.

TOM SHEVLIN, THE YALE GIANT.

This is a photograph of Yale's great athlete, Tom Shevlin. On the baseball diamond, the football gridiron and in the athletic field the big fellow shines. As a thrower of the hammer he is an expert, and he was caught by a photographer while training in this branch of sport.

CAPT. SCHICK SAYS LAST EVENT MAY DECIDE MEET

Special to the Boston American.

YALE FIELD, New Haven, May 20.—For their sixth meet in the nine-year struggle for the dual cup, Yale and Harvard track teams met here this afternoon, Yale with eight men crippled and out of the competition, Harvard handicapped by fighting on hostile soil and an unfamiliar track. Three times Yales has won, Harvard twice.

Captain Schick of Harvard and Captain McLanahan of Yale admitted this morning that they regarded the meet as an even contest, not to be decided till the last event was over.

The Yale field track headquarters accommodated about three thousand spectators, and they were filled, a cluster of about three hundred Harvard men sitting together and whooping up encouragement for "Fair Harvard" in every clash of the Blue and the Crimson.

Weather conditions were ideal for the event, a bright morning sun helping to bring out society in force for the early afternoon sport.

With the veteran New York officials in charge, James E. Sullivan as referee and S. D. See as starter, the events were started promptly on time. The regular intercollegiate list of thirteen events was contested, firsts counting as five points, seconds as two and thirds as one, fifty-three, or a majority of the 104 points being necessary to win.

YATES MAY GO TO PRINCETON

CHICAGO, May 20.—"Guv" Yates, the first baseman of the University of Chicago baseball team, who was put off the team by Coach Stagg for insubordination, declares that he will leave school at the end of the present quarter and enter one of the big eastern schools. Princeton will probably have the services of the hard-hitting first baseman next season.

Yates claims that he has been badly treated by Assistant Coach Harper since the beginning of the year and that the coach was altogether in the wrong in the mixup at Champaign Saturday. Harper struck the first blow, according to the testimony of the players, and Yates is winning all kinds of praise for his action in refusing to apologize to the man who struck him.

At present the Maroons are without a first baseman and there is but little material in sight. Meiggs and Abbott were tried at the initial corner in the Dennison game, but neither man made good. One of the pitchers will probably be shifted to first.

GOLF "PROS" PLAN TOURNEY

CHICAGO, May 20.—Local golf "pros" are planning an association to promote tournaments among the professionals for the purpose of determining local and State championships. The open event of the Western Golf Association is of sufficient importance to attract the leading experts of the country, and for several seasons past much of the prize money has been carried off by Willie Anderson, Alexander Smith, David Brown and other Eastern experts.

It is not that the local men wish to have the Easterners debarred from participation in this event, but that they desire to have one or more events to determine supremacy of the players in this section of the country. With this end in view it is possible the promoters will endeavor to get some of the local clubs to take up the matter.

If this can be done there may be one tournament to decide the championship of Chicago and vicinity, and another to determine the championship of the Middle West. This latter would take in players from St. Louis, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Paul and Milwaukee. An informal meeting was held yesterday and definite plans will be arranged later.

EASTERN Y. C. TO HOLD LONG RACE

The regatta committee of the Eastern Yacht Club has announced that the club has practically perfected arrangements for an ocean race, starting August 21 at Marblehead and finishing at Halifax.

The date selected for the start is one on which the largest fleet of the year is expected to be in Marblehead Harbor, including the vessels of the New York Yacht Club that will finish the club cruise at Marblehead on August 17, and remain for the Eastern Yacht Club's regatta on Saturday, two days later.

The committee has received assurances that several large schooners will be entered for the race, and the entry of the Corona, N. Y. Y. C., A. F. Luke owner, is already in hand. It is probable that William B. Iselin's schooner Emerald, N. Y. Y. C., will also be an early entry. The owners of other large schooners of the New York Club have been communicated with, and favorable answers are expected to a request that they enter their vessels.

Big Schooners to Meet.

In its own fleet the Eastern Club has plenty of good material for entries, including, in the schooner classes, Constellation, Hoosier, Chanticleer, Hope Leslie, Puritan, Undercliff, Rondina and a number of others, and among the single stickers the smart little sloop Cossack, thirty-foot Dorel and many of larger size. The Dorel probably will be one of the smallest boats entered. She holds the club championship of her class for last year. The Cossack has already been entered, and her owner, Henry Morss, is working actively to secure other entries.

The course for the race is approximately 360 miles long, with a straight course of about 240 miles from Marblehead Light to Cape Sable. The finish will be in Halifax Harbor, and the yachts will anchor off the Royal Nova Scotia Yacht Squadron's house. As yet no official correspondence has passed between the clubs relative to the Eastern Club's visit, but it is expected the Halifax Club will give their Yankee cousins a warm welcome and arrange races in Halifax Harbor for their own and the visiting yachts.

Fosters Ocean Racing.

The promotion of this race is in keeping with a policy adopted by the Eastern Club last year to foster deep-water racing. This policy was inaugurated by a race from New York to Marblehead, but for several reasons the course chosen was not an ideal one, and this year it was considered expedient to send the yachts over deeper water. As this is the first international ocean race to be sailed between a port in the United States and one in the British provinces, much good to yachting in both countries is expected from it.

HOLY CROSS HOPED TO TURN TABLES ON YALE

WORCESTER COLLEGIANS HAD OUT THEIR STRONGEST TEAM, WITH SPRING IN BOX.

Special to the Boston American.

FITTON FIELD, Worcester, May 20.—Fitton Field was formally dedicated today by suitable exercises, of which the contest with Yale was the most important feature. Previous to the game, the rival teams, headed by the band and Captains Spring and Bowman, marched around the track to the flagpole in deep centre field. Here Captain Spring, assisted by Captain Bowman, raised a new purple and white flag bearing the words "Fitton Field." The game started when Mayor Blodget threw the first ball on the diamond.

Yale was an even keener rival for Holy Cross in baseball than Harvard, who lately went down to defeat before the Worcester boys. Yale scored a win in New Haven a week ago over the Purple by a score of 4 to 3, but despite this fact the Mt. St. James athletes was confident of winning. Captain Spring has regained complete use of his pitching arm and was in the box for Holy Cross.

Riordan and Merrick, the usual umpires for Holy Cross and Yale, respectively officiated as umpires.

"HACK" IS AS FORMIDABLE A CHAMPION AS IS JEFFRIES

NEW YORK, May 20.—No athlete is so great that he cannot be beaten, but it looks as if they will be a long time finding the man to down George Hackenschmidt, the Russian giant, who left for home this week. If strength and skill and courage and great experience in the game were sufficient to overthrow him then Tom Jenkins would have been the victor on Thursday night.

But all these factors were useless when pitted against the brutal, crushing strength and marvellous swiftness of the Russian Lion. He plunged through the most punishing locks and grips as easily as Gulliver snapped the threads to bind him down.

There is something uncanny in the strength of Hackenschmidt. It is so great that he can set all the ordinary rules of the wrestling game at defiance and still win. His face showed annoyance, for example, early in the contest with Jenkins when the old champion grabbed him by the thigh and tried to stand him on his head.

Found Jenkins Easy.

Against the average first-class wrestler—say a fellow who can easily lift half a ton—Jenkins has always found this thigh hold a dangerous and effective attack. But what did Hackenschmidt do? He shook himself briskly and tossed Jenkins off, just as you will see a horse shake off a bothersome fly by shivering his withers. Again and again Jenkins got holds on the Russian which against the ordinary champion should have proved effective. But Hackenschmidt plunged through them and escaped by merely shrugging himself.

The melancholy Gotch, once a promising wrestler, who fell down badly in his late match with Jenkins, declared with great positiveness that if Jenkins once got behind Hackenschmidt on the mat it would be all over but the shouting. It certainly was over with Gotch when Jenkins got behind him. Yet Jenkins did get behind Hachenschmidt on the mat half a dozen times, and he did try all he knew how with leg holds, crotch holds and body holds to turn the big fellow over. Hack only stopped long enough to find out that he was in danger. Then in every case he leaped to his feet and left Jenkins sprawling on the mat, discomfited, surprised, looking about in a puzzled way to see what had become of his victim.

A neck-lock is an awful thing in a westling match. It crushes the life out of a man, robs him of his strength, leaves him helpless in the hands of his adversary. But when Jenkins got a neck-lock on Hack and began to heave, the Russian simply drew his head down between his shoulders and the punishing neck-lock flew off to take the place among the things that were.

In one word, Hackenschmidt's strength and speed are so great that he can defy all the skill and strategy of the most eminent men in the wrestling game. Tom Jenkins tried all his tricks, but it was as if a clever little boy were trying to throw a powerful man. And all the time the Russian was constantly flying at him like a lion at his prey. Hack is well called the Russian Lion. Poor Jenkins was a mere mastiff, but a mere mastiff just the same.

Not Scientific.

It cannot be said that Hackenschmidt shows great expert knowledge of the fine tricks and strategies of catch-as-catch-can wrestling. But why should he? How much did Gulliver know about the mining and engineering and war-making arts of the Lilliputians? Yet when he wished to move he smashed through their devices and came away as he choose.

The strength of Hackenschmidt is something without a parallel in these times. Veterans say that Clarence Whistler was such a man as this, though in a lesser degree. He is one of those of whom it can truthfully be said that he does not know quite how strong he is. Compared with all the other strong men he is a freak, a monster, a superman. He was born a strong baby. He was always sedulously cultivated and guarded his strength.

Hackenschmidt's methods of training would not suit every man, though they suit him to perfection. He believes in hard work, and a great deal of it. He eats a great deal and of almost every variety of food. He is fond of sweets, and eats them freely while in training, though all other athletes are afraid of them. He does not use tobacco or acholic drinks. He is a sort of Nazarite of modern times—a freak of marvellous strength, such as may not appear again in a century.

BIG AUTO RACE ON OLD COURSE

Special to the Boston American.

NEW YORK, May 20.—It has been about decided by the commission of the Vanderbilt auto cup race to hold that event this year in October, the 7th to 14th being the dates most probable for selection. The course will be in Nassau County and will be, in the main, the same as used last year if permission can be obtained.

Entries have been received from Italy, France, Germany and America, with assurances of others to come from Switzerland and Belgium. It is expected that there will be more than a dozen candidates from this country.

ERNE EASILY BEAT HERMAN

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, May 20.—Young Erne proved too clever for "Kid" Herman of Chicago at the Knickerbocker A. C. The former had easily the better of it in every round and at several stages had his rival almost out.

RACES TO-DAY ON SPEEDWAY

The third matinee of the Metropolitan Club will be held on the Charles River speedway this afternoon. There is a great deal of interest in the fast trot. Tom Phair has won twice, but Hylie Bird has been after him all the time, and last Saturday won a heat from him. Hylie Bird has been getting the worst of the sendoff, according to many of the horsemen.

Then there is the bay mare Electra, who walked under the wire in 1:09 last week. She ought to be in the fast class. The chestnut mare Wavelite worked a half in 1:06¼ two weeks ago, and should step three heats close to that mark.

"There are plenty of other fast pacers, including The Private, Brookdale Girl, Clinton E., Whiffet, The Ghost, Joe Trouhy, General Fiske and Diavolo. Out of this field a race should be made where the heats would be faster than 1:06. When Gladys M. gets into the crowd she will make "cold shivers run down some of their backs."

Should Women Propose? By Beatrice Fairfax

If They Should, Men Would Be on Their Good Behavior for Fear They Might Be Left on the Shelf

GIRLS, supposing that it ever did come to pass that woman did the proposing, would it not be delicious to see the marked improvement there would be in the general behavior of men?

You see they would be so afraid of not getting any proposals that they'd be on their best behavior all the time.

Think of the excitement when a rich heiress appeared on the scene.

Heretofore it has been man's privilege to lead a girl to believe that he meant to propose to her, and when it came to the point to "fold his tent like an Arab, and silently steal away," leaving the girl to break her heart or wear the willow in any way she pleased.

It might do some men good if the tables were turned and a little heartache and disappointment were meted out to them.

If women did the proposing it would be interesting to watch the men who would get the most attention.

Some of them, of course, would become unbearably conceited.

And some of those who are most conceited now would be the most astonished men in the world.

The indifferent man would be driven to distraction, because indifference always has a great charm for woman, and she'd be very attentive to him just to find out wherein lay the root and charm of his indifference.

At dances the men would learn how it feels to be a wall flower.

The poor, shy man who finds it impossible to propose to a woman would find it equally impossible to refuse her, and that type of bachelor would speedily become extinct.

The man who is gentle and considerate in his manner toward women and treats them as though they knew something more than how to make beds and cake would be wildly popular and would be sure to marry his first season out.

There is one kind of man that wouldn't get a single proposal, and he's the man who never thinks it worth while to explain things to women.

Oh, there's no doubt about it; woman would get her revenge for generations of slights received from the lords of creation.

On what equal terms the old maid and the old bachelor would meet! No longer would the former have to bear all the brunt of the jokes and criticisms.

Personally, I think it would be a great mistake should it ever become customary for woman to propose.

She would put too much heart and not enough head into the transaction.

She would be continually losing her head over men who had no recommendation save good looks and good clothes.

Proposals would be as thick as blackberries in August.

No, woman has her own sphere, and she fills it well; it is best she should stay in it.

This, however, is merely one woman's view.

There may be women who feel that the power of proposing would be safer in woman's hands than man's.

And how about the men? I wonder what they would think of it!

Wouldn't the boldest of men be embarrassed and frightened speechless if even the timidest mouse of a woman plucked up courage to propose to him?

If he refused her he'd make a fine tale out of it when he rehearsed the scene to his friends, and if he accepted her he'd fling the fact in her face for the rest of their natural lives, but during the proposal he'd be as mild as milk.

I should like to hear your opinions and whether or not you agree with me.

It's rather an important subject, you know, and needs expert opinion.

BRIEF TALKS WITH PEOPLE

by Ella Wheeler Wilcox

To the Mother Who Has Children and to the Woman Who Is About to Become a Mother

IT is not so much what you are doing, my dear madame, before your child is born, as what you are thinking, which moulds its character.

Over and over I would reiterate what I believe to be a great truth—children inherit the suppressed tendencies of their parents—those things of which the parents think and dream and long to do.

Therefore, cultivate your mind to dwell upon good and worthy and beautiful desires. Read tales of noble achievements and histories of great characters, and infuse all your thoughts with high aspirations.

A story comes to me from a personal friend who sings. Before the birth of her son she sang hours at a time day after day and week after week. Her voice was in excellent condition, and she gave full vent to her song impulses.

The child cries at the sound of music and shows an evident distaste for it. He is nearly eight years old now and cannot carry the simplest air. This is because the mother exhausted her own desire to sing during the expecting period.

Had she thought of music, listened to it and enjoyed it mentally and with the imagination it is more than probable that her child would have been musical. Mothers who exhaust their nervous systems in any line of endeavor do not bestow the ability to achieve in this same line upon their children.

THE CAMERA WHICH RECEIVES THE IMPRESSION MUST BE STILL.

If you would give your child certain qualities learn to BE STILL and to think and concentrate and to feel strongly and earnestly.

Watch yourself that you do not indulge in disagreeable moods toward any one. Forgive your enemies and wish them well. Cast out bitterness and anger. You are not longer your own mistress, remember; you belong to your unborn child. Your responsibility is tremendous.

A woman who permitted her thoughts to dwell on vicious and dishonest themes sent TWO HUNDRED CRIMINALS INTO THE WORLD IN FOUR GENERATIONS.

So powerful was her concentration of vicious thought that she was like a poisoned spring, which sends out its death-dealing streams over the land.

Do not permit your eyes to rest upon deformity or ugliness for any length of time if you can avoid it. If you are compelled to be in its presence close your eyes and imagine beauty all about you.

When you fall asleep picture beautiful things in your mind and ask all good angels to guard you and your child.

Believe you are to bring a blessing into the world.

After the child is born begin early to train it to be unselfish and kind and thoughtful.

A letter came to me recently from a friend who spoke of the utter indifference of the average mother of fashion to the manners of her children.

She described an instance as follows: "At a table in Baltimore the other day in a hotel a darling little boy, all dressed up a la marin with his mamma, a lady well passementeried, when he had finished eating shoved his chair back like a Turk, pushed his plate of remains into the middle of the little table and slung his napkin almost into my plate. The mother did not seem to notice these things, but began complacently to wipe off his mouth, straighten his hat and tweak his nose, and walked off perfectly unconcerned. He was a dear chublet, with a good face, but is doubtless on the road to be a common, selfish 'porker.'"

Foreigners criticise severely the table manners of American men. But whenever a man merits such criticism the fault can be traced to the negligence of his mother.

No matter how poor you are or how humble your station, you can make a gentleman of your little son. Any boy who is taught the gentle courtesies of life can be a "gentleman" in America, because here that word does not mean title or aristocratic birth, but good manners.

Teach your daughters not to stare at strangers or whisper audibly behind their hands or laugh loudly after passing people on the street.

Hundreds of fashionably attired young misses just out of private schools, where "good manners" are taught at high prices, are guilty of these vulgarities. However lowly your place in life, you can teach your little girls that kindness, thoughtfulness of feelings of others and politeness are in themselves an education.

In truth, if you begin with the prenatal months and continue their education afterward with unremitting, loving care and patience, you can make your children whatever you desire them to be.

"THERE'S something very rotten in the law to permit such an absurd anomaly," exclaimed the chief of police. "Anyhow, we'll arrest him if only we can catch him.

It was at this point that the police inspector interrupted their conversation.

"Mr. Gerrard," he said breathlessly. "Can you come over to Mr. Blenheim's office immediately? I think I've got hold of a most important thing." And he briefly informed the astonished detective of the state of affairs.

"Of course. I'll come at once," said Gerrard. "Lucky that I was here."

"I think I'll accompany you," said Major Crampton. "You've done very well, inspector," he added approvingly to the pleased official. "I shall not forget it."

"Smart work," added Gerrard. "Come along, major."

They found Mr. Blenheim pacing the room impatiently.

"Any news,

Major Crampton?" he asked.

"None so far," answered the chief constable.

"Who was the last to see Mr. Holland?" asked the lawyer.

"As far as we know at present, sir," answered Gerrard, "Mr. Holland's valet. He left Holland Holme most mysteriously, and up to date we have been unable to find anyone who saw him leave. He was supposed to be dressing for dinner, which was at 9. It was not until he had not put in an appearance, and was nearly half an hour late, that Captain Menzies, one of the guests staying at the house, made inquiries and found that Mr. Holland was missing. We have a very smart officer at the house—Sergeant Tagg. He will ferret out everything there is. I propose going on there at once myself, and to the place of the crime. Meantime every effort is being made to trace the unknown man in the gray check suit. But what is this I hear, sir, about a sealed packet to be opened only in our united presence?"

"There it is," said Mr. Blenheim. "Shall we break the seals?"

"One moment, if I may," answered the detective, taking up the package and examining it closely, handwriting, tape and seals.

"Yes," he mused, "everything is all right. I see Mr. Holland has sealed it himself with his own signet ring. Shall I open it, or will you?"

"Pray do so, Mr. Gerrard," said the lawyer; and the detective broke the seals deliberately.

Then he paused and looked inquiringly at Mr. Blenheim.

"Do you think, sir," he said, "that any one else should be present? Forgive me, major," he added, addressing the chief constable, "but the thought has only just occurred to me."

"I agree with you, Mr. Gerrard," said the lawyer. "Do you mind stepping into the next room, Major Crampton? And you, too, inspector?"

The chief constable and his subordinate obeyed in silence. Mr. Blenheim closed the door upon them.

"Now, Mr. Gerrard, we are alone. Proceed."

The detective opened the package in silence. Mr. Blenheim held his breath.

Thus was the secret of Stephen Holland given to the world.

CHAPTER LXXX.

The Holland Secret.

THE sealed packet contained a neatly tied bundle of papers, and a short letter in the handwriting of Stephen Holland.

The letter was written on black-edged notepaper, bearing the Holland crest and signet, and beneath was the date—a couple of weeks ago.

The letter commenced abruptly, and Gerrard read it aloud in a low but distinct voice. The old lawyer listened breathlessly.

"My dead Blenheim," it ran. "I am about to impose upon you an exceedingly unpleasant duty. When you read these words I shall be a dead man. The reason I have stipulated that this letter should be read in the presence of Detective Gerrard will be obvious to you after you have read the statement which accompanies this.

"I greatly regret that the original statement signed by my father, has been stolen, and the document which accompanied it. The enclosed, however, is, to the best of my belief, an almost accurate copy—certainly in regard to the dates. No difficulty ought to be experienced in obtaining duplicates of the certificates of birth, marriage, etc.

"I particularly wish you, my dear Blenheim, to regard me in the light of a criminal imposter and not to seek to spare me in any way."

Gerrard broke off abruptly, and stared at Mr. Blenheim.

"What in the name of all that is wonderful," he gasped, "is it all about? Is the man mad?"

"The man is dead now," said the lawyer in a choked voice. "Read on."

"'A criminal imposter,'" Gerrard repeated, "'and not to seek to spare me in any way. Neither do I wish to implicate any other persons in this matter.

"'Good-by, Blenheim. You will, I know, be terribly shocked. Thank you for all your good services in the past. I would that I could excuse my action; but I cannot. Yours, HOLLAND.'"

"A most incomprehensible letter!" said Gerrard. "The letter, I should say, of a madman. I should almost feel inclined to deduce from its tone that Mr. Holland was contemplating suicide at the time."

"I cannot understand," murmured the old lawyer. "But the

Other Documents.

may explain."

"Let us examine them closely," said Gerrard. And he extracted some sheets of closely written foolscap from the bundle.

"Holland Holme," he read, "the ——th January, 19——"—"Ah, a day or two before the date of the letter," he added, parenthetically—"I, who have for many years been called and known as Stephen Manners Revelstone Holland, hereby solemnly declare that the facts hereinafter set down are true in every respect, and that the accompanying copy of a statement, written and signed by the late Judge Holland, is a true copy, to the best of my memory."

Here followed, in cold and precise semi-legal phraseology, an account of how the late Judge, on his deathbed, had imposed a solemn duty upon the man who believed he was his son and heir, and how he, Stephen, had taken a sacred oath in the presence of God and a dying man to carry out the directions contained in the statement written by the old judge, and how he had deliberately chosen to break his oath, and live a life of fraud and deceit.

He did not spare himself, and he never once mentioned another name or ventured a single excuse. He told concisely how the papers had been stolen by some unknown person, and how he had been blackmailed by the man, Karl Karoff; how he had assisted him to escape, and supplied him with money, and, indeed, many other things.

There was, however, no mention of Fergus Braine, of Judith Mort or Morley Darch. Stephen had sinned, and he was content to take the whole of the blame. The only thing he said was this:

"That there are certain people living who, by some means or other, are in possession of the whole or part of the facts, I am aware; but the fact does not affect the question, and I have no wish to burden this statement with unnecessary details.

"Who I am I know not, nor care, for when these words are read, I shall be a dead man. The real Stephen Holland is at present living at No. 75 Church street, Greenwich, under the name of George Lang. His mother, Mrs. Lang, is Judge Holland's widow.

"The accompanying statement will explain everything."

That was all save the signature. Nameless fraud though he was, he had perforce to sign the only name he bore, and there it was, bold and defiant, "Stephen Holland."

Mr. Blenheim and the detective stared at each other speechlessly.

"The man is mad!" said the lawyer, in awed tones.

But Gerrard shook his head. His brow was furrowed, his thin lips compressed. Many things were becoming clear to him now.

"Read the statement to which he refers," said the lawyer huskily.

Gerrard extracted another sheet of foolscap from the bundle and read:

"This is a true copy of the story referred to. Every word is burnt into my brain, and I verily believe that if and when the original is recovered and compared with this they will be found to be identical in wording. "STEPHEN HOLLAND."

"Now comes the statement," said Gerrard.

"Holland Holme, 22d January, 1899. I, John Stephen Revelstone Holland, of Holland Holme—"

Gerrard read on, in a low, distinct voice, the statement which the reader perused in Chapter VI. of this story.

Mr. Blenheim made no interruption. He listened breathlessly and spellbound to the greatest revelation that had ever been made to him. When the detective had finished, the old lawyer rose unsteadily to his feet. He was very deeply affected.

"Good heavens!" he groaned. "This is the most awful thing I have ever heard of!"

Gerrard folded up the papers deliberately. Then he turned to Mr. Blenheim.

"Do you know, sir," he said, "that for some little time past I have suspected something of this?"

"Impossible!"

Gerrard nodded.

A large instalment of "Scarlet Lies" will be printed in to-morrow's BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

THE PERFECT FRIENDSHIP

HAVE you not seen the sun and gloaming meet
And mingle in a mystery of hue,
Becoming perfect in the union sweet
Of rose and amber, purple, green and blue—
Each tint the pearly grayness showing through?

Such is the spirit-tint that glows from love,
Like unto that which links us heart to heart.
Incoming trust meets truth. As lay of dove
Our duet-thoughts sound sadly when apart,
Though gay in unison as songs above.

Friendship thus born to touch both night and day,
Like sunset merging in the moonlit eve,
Glows in our sky, and will not pass away,
But grows more precious as it doth receive
Each gleam of joy into life's common gray.

Hearst's Boston American Pattern

A Becoming Blouse for the Schoolgirl

No. 2,792—Every mother knows how tired the schoolgirl becomes of the clothes which she wears every day, and how constant is the demand for something new. The blouse offers an easy way of obtaining this change, as countless are the combinations of chemisettes and ties which can be worn with it. Blue serge is recommended for this waist, as it is light in weight and serviceable, and one chemisette may be of this material. White linen will serve for one, and another can be made of nainsook, slightly fulled, and finished at the neck with a frill of valenciennes. The ties which will vary the outfit are many, but the two latest ideas are wide gold braid knotted loosely or a dashing plaid silk. For a medium size 3¾ yards of 36-inch material are necessary.

Pattern No. 2,792 is in five sizes, from 8 to 16 years.

Send 10 cents to obtain this pattern, postpaid, and the size, name and address to HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston, Mass.

HARVARD MAN CHARGED WITH ROBBING CHUM

PAWNED AND SOLD TICKET

Theodore A. Greene, a Harvard sophomore, twenty-one years of age, is under arrest at Cambridge, charged with stealing a gold watch and chain from a fellow-student, Scott P. McNutt of No. 11 Holyoke Hall. Greene lives at No. 17 Oxford street and was a chum of McNutt. He admits the charge, the police say, and gives as his excuse that he was short of funds.

McNutt's watch, which is a valuable one, disappeared May 12. If Greene had not disposed of the watch he might not have been detected, but the police say he pawned the watch in Boston for $22 and then sold the ticket to a Cambridge business man. Through the latter transaction he was detected.

There has been wholesale stealing going on among the Harvard dormitories during the past two weeks, according to the Cambridge police, and all wise students see to it that their windows and doors are securely locked before going out. The articles stolen during the past few days, according to reports made to the police, are valued at over $1,000. The list of missing articles includes watches, diamonds, musical instruments, books, clothing and money.

F. Dickson, who rooms at No. 55 Matthews, in the college yard, lost a gold watch Wednesday night. He went to bed late and forgot to lock the door. When his room-mate returned he found the door wide open. Charles Marsters, who rooms at No. 31 Stoughton Hall, also in the yard, missed $60 in cash after returning from lectures at Massachusetts Hall, and his suspicions at that time were aroused by the fact that his room door was wide open, when he was positive that he had locked it before going out. A violin is missing, the property of C. Wellington, of No. 24 Matthews, and F. Strauss, of No. 41 Matthews, has lost a diamond and pearl stickpin valued at $80.

The Cambridge police have no other evidence against Greene, although the fact that in McNutt's watch was found a crystal frame that belongs to another watch, makes them suspicious. Although Greene readily admitted that he stole McNutt's watch he denied having had anything to do with the other robberies.

Greene was unable to secure bail. He will be arraigned in the Cambridge court to-day.

The young man is the son of a widow living in Berlin, N. H., but he is being sent through Harvard by an older brother, who is an instructor in a private school at Newport, R. I. His brother will be notified this morning of his arraignment.

WIDOW OF 73 ELOPES WITH GROOM OF 61

Wealthy Wellington Woman the Bride of Lawrence Music Teacher.

TWO YEARS' COURTSHIP

After a courtship of over two years, Mrs. Sarah Jane Bailey, a wealthy widow of seventy-three, living at No. 44 Fifth street, Wellington, and Reuben Merrill, sixty-one years old, a bachelor music teacher, of Lawrence, eloped to Providence on Thursday and were married. The affair has been conducted with the utmost secrecy, the most intimate friends of the couple being left in ignorance. After the ceremony they went to their respective homes, and no one suspected they were man and wife.

Residents of Wellington have regarded with pleasure and some amusement the persistent attentions of Mr. Merrill to the elderly widow, and there was much speculation as to whether the courtship would end in a wedding.

There was much opposition to the marriage on the part of the bride's only relatives, a sister, Mrs. Lydia A. Merrill of West Newbury, and a nephew, George Davis, a shoe manufacturer at Glenwood. There was no doubt that Mrs. Bailey was devoted to her suitor, but the influence of her relatives kept her in a state of indecision.

Thursday morning, however, she made up her mind. Leaving her home ostensibly to go to Boston, she was met by her lover. The two went to Providence where they were married by the Rev. M. S. McCord, returning to their homes the same day.

Mrs. Merrill is the widow of a wealthy shoe manufacturer. Since the death of her two children, several years ago, she has lived in her Wellington home with one companion, Mrs. Lee. The latter was much pleased to hear of the culmination of her friend's romance, and said that it would have been well if the wedding had taken place long ago.

The groom has apartments at No. 228 Essex street, Lawrence. He is one of the best known musicians in New England, and was formerly a fine singer. He was not inclined to discuss his private affairs, and seemed much surprised that the fact of his marriage should have leaked out.

"I have a right to get married if I want to," he said, "and I am not obliged to tell anybody about it. It is my own business, and I have nothing to say. I could get married to-day and not tell of it for twenty-five years, if I wanted to."

Mr. and Mrs. Merrill will spend the Summer at Falmouth, where Mr. Merrill has a Summer cottage.

EMPLOYES MADE GIFT TO MR. PRESTON

5 CENT TIP BY ROCKEFELLER

Oil King's Son Gave Barber a Nickel for Exceptionally Good Work.

PRESERVES IT IN FRAME

NEW YORK, May 21.—Extravagance was never one of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.'s, bad traits. Nevertheless, a barber who cut his auburn locks recently is in possession of a piece of evidence that would indicate that the "Oil King's" son is not parsimonious.

John J. Phelan, who at present guides a razor and shears in the barber shop at No. 21 Spruce street, had the honor of clipping the hair of the millionaire Sunday school teacher last December, and because of the great care he took John D. Rockefeller, Jr., tipped him. This is said to be the only tip the young man ever gave a barber.

"Good work!" said John D., Jr., as he felt in his trousers pocket for change. "Take this," and he handed Phelan a coin.

"What is it, a gold piece?" asked the other barbers as they crowded about Phelan.

Holding the coin between thumb and forefinger, Phelan displayed it aloft. A hearty laugh came from his friends as he held Rockefeller's tip before them.

It was a five-cent piece!

"I will keep it forever," said Phelan.

LADY WILSON LIKES BOSTON

Come Here with Sir Charles, Who Heads Party of Grand Trunk Railway Men.

"IT IS MUCH LIKE HOME"

"I like Boston very much indeed. I think it is the finest city that we have visited in this country. The people here are very hospitable and it is like being home. I think that Boston is superior to New York, but I can't tell exactly how."

This is the verdict of Lady Rives Wilson on the Hub. She expressed her appreciation of the city to-day, and her husband, Sir Charles Wilson, warmly endorsed what she said.

"Your city, said Sir Charles, "has made great headway. The parks are particularly beautiful. I always look forward to a visit to Boston with great pleasure."

Sir Charles, who is president of the Grand Trunk Railway, accompanied by Lady Rives Wilson and suite; C. M. Hays, second vice-president and general manager of the Grand Trunk; E. H. Fitzhugh and F. H. McGuigan, third and fourth vice-presidents respectively; W. D. Robb, superintendent of motive power, and J. W. Loud, freight and traffic manager of the same road, left the North Union Station at 9:50 to-day for Quebec by way of Portland. The purpose of the trip is to inspect the Grand Trunk road westward from Portland. The party came here from New York.

BARRETT FEARS YELLOW FEVER

"CLIMATE AGAINST US"

NEW YORK, May 20.—Among the passengers who arrived to-day on board the steamer Advance from Colon was John Barrett, United States Minister to Panama. Mr. Barrett said:

"Conditions on the isthmus at present present many difficulties, and while it is not a case for pessimism, it is not the engineering, it is not the administration problem that is confronting us. These are of secondary consideration to the problem of health and sanitation. The climate is against us and that we have with us always. Under the efficient care of Dr. Gorgas, the eminent yellow fever expert, everything is being done possible to prevent the increase of mortality. An alarming condition is the report of five cases of yellow fever in Colon. It is alarming because up to this time none had appeared, and it was hoped that the situation was in hand. I do not believe in deceiving the public in these matters. It is far better that the truth should be known.

"I believe these sanitary and health problems will be successfully solved, but they far overshadow all others. I am going to Bogota and hope to accomplish something to establish cordial relations between Colombia and our country."

RAISE $10,000 FOR WELLESLEY

Carnegie's Conditional $125,000 Gift Meets Instant Response.

GIRLS APPLAUD DONATION

Although it was only to-day that Andrew Carnegie's gift of $125,000 to Wellesley College, conditional upon the same amount being raised by friends of the college, was officially announced, already $10,000 has been raised toward the necessary $125,000.

The announcement of Mr. Carnegie's gift was made at chapel to-day, and was greeted with loud applause from the hundreds of girls there assembled. The money is for the erection of a new library building.

The present library is in College Hall, where it occupies three rooms. There are about 57,000 volumes of general reference books stored in these rooms. The quarters are cramped, and there is not room enough for the proper storage of several thousand valuable manuscripts and special collections of books.

The need of a new library building, therefore, is great. Owing to the severe drains upon the Wellesley treasury of the last few years it would be next to impossible for the alumni to contribute enough to build a suitable library for some time to come, and Mr. Carnegie's gift is regarded as very timely. The graduates and faculty are confident they will raise the conditional sum.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

Organized labor throughout Massachusetts is to assert itself strongly at the next State election. Nearly every labor measure of importance within the last few years has met with defeat or been pigeonholed, and the trades unionists of Massachusetts have now determined upon concerted action at the polls.

The campaign will begin next Tuesday morning, when delegates from the various Central Labor Unions of Massachusetts will meet at the Quincy House, this city, to hold a conference for the formulation of plans. This meeting is the result of an agitation started by the Brockton Central Labor Union. The call is signed by E. Gerry Brown and Thomas H. Fair of the Brockton Central Labor Union Legislative committee.

The Massachusetts State Branch of the American Federation of Labor is also to wage a campaign in behalf of the advancement of labor legislation. Secretary-Treasurer Dennis D. Driscoll will soon issue a circular to every labor organization in Massachusetts showing the stand taken by every Senator and Representative in the State on labor measures during the past year.

STATIONARY ENGINEERS.

A committee has been appointed by Stationary Engineers' Union, No. 16, to endeavor to have none but union engineers employed on a large department store which is being constructed in this city. The executive committee reported considerable progress in the organizing of engineers in down-town mercantile houses and hotels. Two new members were admitted.

John H. Carr, general organizer of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Union, addressed the meeting and requested that the engineers use their good offices in seeing that none but union workmen are employed in repairing structural iron work.

Local No. 17 accepted the invitation of Engineers' Union No. 263 to attend its first anniversary on June 6 at No. 995 Washington street.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

"Municipal Ownership" will be the subject of an address by William N. Osgood, chairman of the Municipal Ownership League, before the Cambridge Central Labor Union, at Central Labor Union Hall, Sunday afternoon, May 28. This is one of a series of lectures to be held under the auspices of the Cambridge Central Labor Union. All trades unionists and their friends are invited.

LABOR NOTES.

Coastwise Longshoremen's Assembly No. 1,062, K. of L., will hold an anniversary celebration to-morrow afternoon, at No. 70 Main street, Charlestown.

Hay and Grain Teamsters' Union holds a special meeting to-morrow afternoon at Dover Hall to receive reports on the 1905 wage scale, which has been submitted to the employers.

ROBBERS GET $4,000 IN GEMS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, May 20.—Four robbers raided a house at No. 2,129 Dearborn street early to-day, bound four of the occupants hand and foot and escaped with diamonds valued at $4,000. Before the robbers succeeded in binding and gagging Blanche Hartcroft and the others, they were forced to overcome Joe Nickols in a fierce fight. Nickols was struck on the head with a revolver and made unconscious.

MINSTRELS CLOSE SEASON.

The Mattapoisett Club of Dorchester closed its season with a most successful minstrel show in Bloomfield Hall, Dorchester. Miss Agnes E. Mason and C. W. Scott were the "bones," and Miss D. B. Anderson and F. J. Tyler were "tambos." After the show the hall was cleared for dancing.

Would You Like to Be a Fairy?

IT IS EASY

HOW EASY IT IS WILL APPEAR IN THE

Boston Sunday American TO-MORROW

There is no use in keeping the secret bottled up until then, because it is not necessary. No Sunday paper but the AMERICAN will help in the fairy making.

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN fairy is only a mask, but it is the nearest approach to a fairy's facial resemblance that has yet been produced.

The fairy has the nicest wavy curls, the fullest red lips and the prettiest dimpled chin imaginable. She has jewels sparkliing in her hair, glowing red and white jewels.

It is just the sort of thing that will delight the youngsters and with many of them scattered about the neighborhood fairy parties will become all the rage.

Besides the fairy mask there is another cut out that will amuse both young and old. It deals with the famous four and twenty blackbirds that were baked within a pie. With the two sections cut out and pasted up as are stated in the directions, the effect is startling.

By all means order the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN and get the mask and the blackbird cut out. Order in advance for the supply may not last.

An Old Republic Trying to Choke a Young One

Shall We Ever See That Situation Between France and Russia?

Nations are often misrepresented by elected agents of the people. They are misrepresented, also, by the financial leanings of the prosperous few.

This observation applies especially to France in her relations with Russia.

The majority of Frenchmen are ardent republicans, hating the kind of government that oppresses Russia.

Yet public officials have formed a strong alliance between the French republic and Russian despotism.

And the French people have loaned about twenty-five hundred million of dollars to the Russian Czar—by the buying of Russian bonds.

The French, individually by far the most economical and the richest people in the world, have lent to Russia nearly fifteen milliards, or fifteen thousand million francs—which is three times the enormous indemnity that Bismarck compelled the French to pay Prussia after 1870.

It is curious to see the French people, so soon after the payment of five milliards to Prussia, engaged in loaning fifteen milliards to the oppressive Russian government.

French peasants and small property owners have supplied the money that built the Russian fleet—so easily destroyed by the Japanese—that fortified the Russian harbors in the East and that sent the hundreds of thousands of Russian soldiers along the Trans-Baikal railroad to be defeated by the Mikado.

It will be difficult for future history to understand how it could happen that the first great European republic should use her resources to enable the last great European despotism to maintain its hold and continue to strangle liberty.

A more curious paradox than that may confront the historian of the future.

It is possible—although we think not likely—that the republic of France will be found using its military forces to prevent the establishment of a republic in Russia.

The tendency in Russia now is toward the establishment of a republican government—or a constitutional government that will soon develop into a republic. The avowed purpose of the revolutionary leaders is to repudiate all of the Czar's debts as soon as they get power. That would mean repudiating the debt of thousands of millions of francs which Russia owes to the French people.

If this repudiation occurs—and it will occur when the Russian people control their government—the French money lenders, big and little, would call upon the French army to force the Russian republic to pay the Czar's debts.

Should the power of the money lenders and little bondholders be sufficiently great, cynical old history would smile to see the old French republic fighting to choke the young Russian republic in the cradle.

Such a situation is not impossible. On the contrary, those that believe in the power of money would look upon it as actually inevitable.

We think, however, that the real French people rule France to-day; that the French republic has passed beyond the stage when money will have power to sacrifice a thousand men in order to collect ten thousand francs.

There is a lesson for American investors in the dilemma which is worrying France just now.

The lesson is, don't buy Russian bonds. Don't invest in any Russian securities whatever. You are simply betting on the Czar's continued power when you make such an investment.

CHEAPER GAS FOR CHARLESTOWN NEXT

The fight of the BOSTON AMERICAN, aided by many public-spirited civic bodies, against extortion and over-capitalization, has resulted in a partial victory for right. The gas situation, thus clarified, will result in many benefits to Boston proper.

But Boston is simply an aggregation of small municipalities, and Charlestown is a large, growing and influential part of the city. Its citizens, customers of the Charlestown Gas Company, have filed with the Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners their petition that the price of gas be reduced to them.

Their petition has been fully and elaborately tried and the decision of the Gas Commissioners has been awaited with interest. It is understood that the Gas Commissioners had decided to await the result of the Boston contest before deciding it. There is need for haste and it is to be hoped that the decision will soon follow that is of so much interest to the citizens of Charlestown.

The Boston Companies after having strenuously said that in three companies there could be no reduction in price and refusing to reduce as to the others, have finally submitted to evidence and sentiment; they have accepted the Act which will make the price of gas in Boston 90 cents.

The Charlestown Gas Company is able to do the same or more; it is a prosperous company; it buys its gas from the Boston interests and has for years paid too large dividends, much more than other public service corporations earn or pay, and before it got its gas at present prices, it was as prosperous.

The improvement in its plant now being made, with others contemplated, will enable it to make its product at low cost; increase in use should follow. Lower prices must naturally result.

It is hard to see how the Gas Commissioners can fail to reduce the Charlestown price in the interests of justice and uniformity. The Gas Commission have a sufficient opportunity to show their disinterestedness, their care of the people's interests and yet a desire to do full justice to their wards, that apparently the Public Lighting Commission or the Legislature did not wholly credit them with.

Government by commission is only tolerable when the delegated authority is wisely and equitably exercised. We think it will be.

What Wall Street Thinks of Lawson

By W. R. Givens

(FROM THE INDEPENDENT.)

"WHAT is Mr. Lawson's reputation in Wall Street?" I asked a well-known banker recently; not because I was curious to know his opinion, but rather that I wished to see if I had properly gauged Wall Street opinion of the picturesque Boston character who seems now constantly to be in a state of eruption.

"Reputation?" the banker queried; "Lawson's reputation?" Then, after a pause, slowly, "Why—he hasn't any."

This, however, is drawing the long bow. It cannot be truly said to represent the real Wall Street view of Lawson. For that matter, properly to understand and appreciate this point of view it is necessary to divide the Street, like Gaul, into three parts, to wit: the derelicts, the rank and file, and the responsible banking interests, for each one of these groups looks at Mr. Lawson with a different eye, and in the metaphorical handling of him uses pitchforks or gloves or fumigating solutions, as the case may be.

To begin at the beginning: When Mr. Lawson began his campaign for the purification of the financial centre of this newer world, for the elimination of all the ills to which financial flesh is heir or prone and for the extinction of the capitalists who have done so much to build up the great industries of the country—such men as Mr. J. P. Morgan, Mr. J. D. Rockefeller, Mr. James Stillman, Mr. H. H. Rogers, Mr. H. C. Frick and their co-workers and associates—all Wall Street laughed.

The predictions were many that Mr. Lawson's move was merely a bluff, that in due time he would call himself off for a consideration, and that his campaign was that, vulgarly speaking, of a "sorehead" who, successful financially, found himself as it were a social outcast among the men whom he had helped or who had helped him to riches.

Not for an instant was it believed that he would make good, or make a show of making good, his promise or his threats to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth about "The Crime of Amalgamated" and about, also, sundry other financial crimes. This was the first phase of the Wall Street idea.

Passing over several months, we come to the second phase. Mr. Lawson in his magazine articles was, in the opinion of some people, beginning to strike near home. Without doubt he was telling some truths—how much or how little only those on the inside really knew.

Beyond this Mr. Lawson stood revealed in a new light. Most people had regarded him, if they regarded him at all, as merely a man who had a great deal of money and who in the making of it had had neither time nor opportunity nor inclination to develop the intellectual and the finer side.

And, behold! there appeared a new Lawson: a student of conditions, a close observer of things, a reader of character, a man with a philisophy of his own and, above all, a writer at once so forceful, so picturesque and so alluring that he fairly carried his readers with him. It was a revelation.

The man was more than a financier. He was a literary artist; in the opinion of most people in Wall Street the best magazine writer of the day, plausible, powerful, amazingly original and always interesting.

Thereupon the Wall Street attitude changed. From one of indifference and of ridicule it gave way to that of interest and curiosity and finally of wonder—wonder, after all, if Mr. Lawson wasn't really more in earnest than people had originally given him credit for; wonder if perchance he would tell "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

Briefly put, then, the Wall Street estimate of Lawson is this:

The more recent of the financial outcasts, once prosperous, but now content to cling to the ragged edge of the Street in the hope of a turn for the better in their fortunes, damn him as the author and agent of their troubles.

The transient speculators who stand by the ticker the livelong day incline strongly to him, aye, believe in him and are confident that he is a man with a mission, that he is telling much truth and that in the end he will carry the people with him in his fight against the "unrighteous system" of which he was so long an integral part.

The brokers and the bankers regard him as a disturber of the peace and as one who is actuated by selfish motives, by wounded pride and by a desire for revenge—all three.

His, they say, is the buccaneering kind; the "pea-under-the-shell" type, who, always smiling, ever gives you the worth of your money and the right change back—"in the next."

He is, you will be told if you care to ask, not within speaking distance of the Morgan, Rockefeller, Stillman, Frick class. They and their kind will be in Wall Street when he and his kind are nowhere. Mr. Keene is immeasurably above him; even Mr. Gates with all his faults is far superior to him.

In short, he is a good man—bright, brainy, forceful, shrewd, energetic and courageous—gone wrong. As Kipling would say there is "too much Ego in his Cosmos," and the Ego is not of the right kind. Such at least is Wall Street banking opinion.

Withal, it is agreed by all classes that Mr. Lawson is at once picturesque and amusing, a skillful market operator, a richer man as a result of his crusade, and last, but not least, a direct and pleasing contributor to the gayety of nations.

To obtain perfection it is not necessary to do singular things, but to do common things singularly well.—ST. FRANCIS DE SALES.

Some Wonders of Memory

FROM time to time marvellous feats of memory astonish the reading public, and there are historic instances of men able to repeat from memory book after book, but recent scientific investigations have made even more apparent the almost incredible performances of the human brain.

Anatomists and psychologists, working together, have located the seat of special faculties in certain parts of the brain, and demonstrated beyond doubt that affection of the different lobes will affect the reason in altogether different ways.

But no one has yet been able to point with certainty the method by which the wonderful storehouse of information which we call the brain avails itself of the facts laid away in the recesses of the mind.

How often are children chided for their forgetfulness, and how many times a day is it necessary to remind the average person of some duty left undone through oversight? Yet in view of the tremendous work the brain is called on to do, is it not rather remarkable that so few things are forgotten?

Scientists have proved that it takes less than one-third of a second for the brain to receive an impression, which would give a man at the age of fifty years 4,733,640,000 impressions. If one-third is allowed off for sleep we still have the quite respectable total of 3,155,760,000 separate and distinct events impressed on the brain.

Surely the average memory may be praised for the manner in which it acquits itself of its stupendous task, and a man's recollection of events of ten years ago may be excused for being perhaps a little hazy, when we stop to consider that the same scientific gentlemen who have so carefully estimated the number of impressions received during a half century of life informs us that the average brain has 205,542 traces of ideas for every grain of gray matter.

Little Editorials from the People

WHY NOT HAVE MUNICIPAL DRUG STORES

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

The more we consider municipal ownership we see how well it would apply to other utilities besides those that are corporation owned. Why would it not be good to have municipal drug stores, especially in the thickly populated parts of the cities?

A few nights ago a friend of the writer had to run six blocks to find a drug store where he could get some medicine for his sick child. He passed many drug stores but they were all closed. Druggists say that they cannot afford to keep their stores open all night; it would mean two sets of clerks, and the drug clerks now work outrageously long hours.

Why would not municipal ownership make it better all around? It would guarantee better service, pure medicines and make better working hours for the clerks and save the public from the threatened capture by the Drug Trust.

PRAISES ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I desire very much to show my appreciation of Ella Wheeler Wilcox's article on "The Religion of the Masters." I have spent many years in the study of ancient religion and am always glad to see that others have the same interest to get at the foundation of truth. A great many people are anxious to learn if only they had the means of obtaining real information in regard to things that so often remain "a mystery."

I wish to thank Miss Wilcox for her high appreciation of the founders of the earlier religions. Evolution will bring harmony out of chaos, truth out of tradition and superstition. "R. K. L."

"LET THE PEOPLE INVESTIGATE THE GRACE DARBY CASE"

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

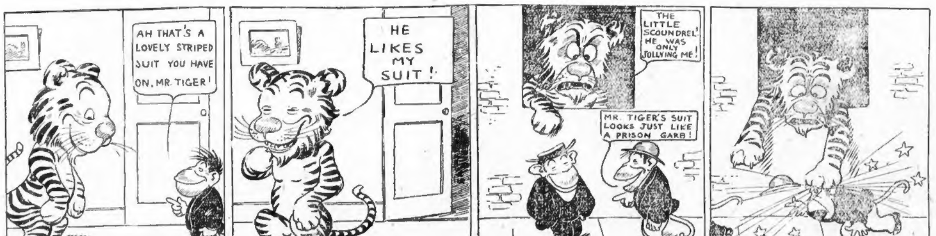

If Grace Darby was sane, why was she kept for years in the asylum; or if she was insane, why was she helped to get away by the officials or some of the officials of the asylum? Perhaps they thought they had kept the poor creature long enough wrongfully incarcerated. They may not have wanted the circumstances of her incarceration recalled. Is not this case of Grace Darby something similar to the case of Babro, now of New York, who was kept for years in the State Insane Asylum, and who was promised his freedom, if he would keep his mouth shut? How many similar cases are there?

You say the people of Massachusetts have the right to know how the asylum is being run. Let the people themselves investigate this strange case.
